GMA: Total war on terror

4 mosques bombed but no one hurt

By the PDI Mindanao Bureau

DAVAO CITY—Less than six hours after the bombing of the Sasa wharf here on Wednesday night, unidentified armed men attacked four mosques in the city with grenades and automatic rifle fire.

No one was injured in what a police official later called an "agitation attack." But the death toll from the wharf bombing reached 16, as another victim died while being treated at the government-run Davao Medical Center. The number of injured was also updated to 55.

The Sasa bombing prompted President Macapagal-Arroyo to declare a "state of lawless violence" in the city, adding that she would order the military, normally in charge of external defense, to help police crack down on "lawless elements and terrorists."

The President declared total war on terrorism.

After the mosque bombings, Davao City Mayor Rodrigo Duterte appealed for calm, saying: "We don't need vengeance."

During the 1993 bombing of the city's San Pedro Cathedral, in which seven people died and 132 others were wounded, a similar attack on mosques happened. Police said then the attacks may have been in retaliation, but yesterday police officials

Sister Dulce fighter for peace, oppressed

By Ma. Ceres P. Doyo

HER name means sweetness, but Sr. Dulce de Guzman was a fighter, especially when she was defending the oppressed.

Rose Subido, a human rights worker in Zamboanga City, called her the "little hope of the communities here."

Sister Dulce, of the Franciscan Sisters of the Immaculate Conception (SFIC), was among the 16 who died in the Sasa wharf bombing in Davao City on Wednesday night.

In a speech after a peace concert in Mindanao not too long ago, Sister Dulce had said: "Peace not war. Love, understanding and sharing are what we need today. In the midst of poverty, terrorism, hatred and anger we need to pause for a moment. God, what is going on with the life you gave us? I am disturbed about what is happening in our surroundings. We have to do something. We have to start with our own selves. Let peace begin with me, begin with us."

'Ma, bring me to the hospital'; 'Son, there's no car'

DAVAO CITY—A young man died because there was no vehicle to bring him to the hospital. A father of five, who had just arrived in this city to attend a funeral, made it to one, only to die here.

The victims of Wednesday night's bombing in the Sasa wharf here were bound together by the twisted logic of death.

The last words uttered by 14-year-old Bonnel Songaling to his mother Felomina, 40, were: "Ma, bring me to the hospital."

But Felomina, a sidewalk vendor outside the Sasa wharf, could not do anything but watch her only child draw his last breath. All Felomina could say was, "Son, there is no vehicle."

Seconds later, Bonnel passed away.

"It was as if my heart was being crumpled. I wanted to bring him to the hospital but there was no vehicle available," Felomina later told the INQUIRER.

Bonnel, a sophomore student at the San Juan High School here, had apparently believed that doctors could save him from the serious head injury he sustained.

"I thought I would go crazy. After he died, my sight dimmed," Felomina, who also had shrapnel injuries, said.

All mothers remember how good their children were but Felomina said Bonnel was the epitome of a model child.

Ador somersaults, clears Lacson

By Volt Contreras

THE MAN who linked Sen. Panfilo Lacson to various crimes is now saying that he had been pressured by his former military handlers to do so.

Sixteen months after the justice department and the military dropped him from custody, Angelo "Ador" Mawanay yesterday said he had fabricated what he had told the media and the Senate about Lacson's alleged criminal activities as then chief of the Philippine National Police.

In a hotel room press conference arranged by the Pwersa ng Masang Pilipino, Mawanay retracted his charges against Lacson but replaced these with allegations directed at President Macapagal-Arroyo's husband, Jose Miguel Arroyo.

He said that from December 2001 up to the last few weeks, Arroyo had been hiring him for his "hacking" skills to electronically transfer funds from Lacson's "bank accounts" to three designated accounts, and to "simulate fictitious e-mail correspondence between and among" Lacson, the senator's subordinate and ally Michael Ray Aquino who is now in hiding abroad, and a nonexistent Chinese

US forces 10 km away from Baghdad; 500 Iraqis killed

SOUTHWEST OF BAGHDAD—United States troops, powering their way to within sight of Baghdad's skyline, reached the capital city's airport yesterday after fierce fighting with Iraqi forces two weeks into the war.

Advance armored units of the US 3rd Infantry Division were just 10 km from the southern edge of Baghdad early morning Thursday (about 6 p.m. Manila time yesterday), US military sources in the area said, as the Americans moved on Baghdad from two directions to choke off the regime of Saddam Hussein.

"I can confirm they're outside the airport," Ma. Randi Steffy, a spokesperson for the US Central Command in Qatar, said of the facility southwest of the capital.

"The dagger is clearly pointed at the heart of the regime and will remain pointed at it until the regime is gone," Brig. Gen. Vincent Brooks told a news conference at US Central Command's forward base in Qatar.

The aerial blitz against Baghdad showed no signs of abating as dull explosions from the edge of the city continued during the morning after a night of heavy bombardment on its southern and south-eastern fringes.

US officers said some 500 Iraqi troops were killed, including members of the Special Republican Guard, Saddam's toughest unit, in clashes with US forces for a key bridge some 30 km southwest of Baghdad.

A BBC reporter traveling with the Americans said thousands of US Army vehicles crossed the Euphrates River heading toward Baghdad after a "fierce fight" to seize a dual-carriageway bridge.

He described a scene of "Iraqi prisoners on their knees, with American soldiers standing over GOVERNMENT lawyers yesterday asked the Quezon City Regional Trial Court to raffle off the revived Kuratong Baleleng cases, since the original assignment of the cases to Branch 81 was not attended by a raffle.

In an urgent and ex-parte motion, Department of Justice prosecutors led by Chief State Prosecutor Jovencito Zuñiga said the 11 multiple murder cases filed on June 6, 2001 had only been "assigned" to Branch 81.

"No raffle was conducted despite the requirement of Supreme Court Circular No. 7," Zuñiga said.

The SC circular issued on Sept. 23, 1974 requires that all cases filed in court, "in stations or groupings where there are two or more branches, shall be assigned or distributed to the different branches by raffle."

Zuñiga also cited the change in docket numbers and other particulars of the cases filed against Sen. Panfilo "Ping" Lacson and several of his former subordinates in the police service, as a reason for raffling off the cases.

He said the cases pending in Branch 81, which is presided over by Judge Theresa Yadao, bear "Criminal Case Nos. Q-99-81679 to 89, which were dismissed by the same branch on March 29, 1999."

The new cases, which were revived by the DOJ in June 2001, bear Case Nos. 01-101102 to 01-101112.

The old cases had implicated 26 accused, 11 as principals and 15 as accessories, while the new cases involve 34 accused, all charged as principals, including Lacson, who has since become a senator.

"Wherefore, it is respectfully prayed... that the instant cases be immediately raffled pursuant to the aforesaid SC circular," the motion said.

"We have new information, new witnesses, new docket numbers, so the cases must be raffled off," it added.

The motion was prepared by State Prosecutors Peter Ong and Ruben Zacarias, and QC Assistant City Prosecutors Conrado Jamolin and Raymond Jonathan Lledo.

The DOJ filed the motion two days after the Supreme Court, voting 10-4 with one abstention, ordered the reopening of the criminal cases against Lacson, Chief Superintendents Jewel Cansan and Romeo Acop, Senior Supt. Francisco Zubia and 30 of their officers and men.

Zuñiga was quick to state that the motion to raffle off the cases was not a reflection on the competence or impartiality of Yadao.

The INQUIRER tried to get a comment from Yadao but she has refused to give statements to the media since Tuesday when the Supreme Court came out with its decision to revive the cases.

On Wednesday, Zuñiga created an eight-man panel headed by himself and Quezon City Prosecutor Claro Arellano as chair and vice chair, respectively, to prosecute the multiple murder cases.

He said the panel was "ready for any court skirmishes" with Lacson, who had declared on Monday his intention to run for president in 2004.

Lacson has 15 days to file a reconsideration of the SC ruling.

In the meantime, the DOJ continues to prepare for the trial.

Justice Secretary Simeon Datumanong and Zuñiga told reporters yesterday the DOJ was preparing to reinstate Armando Capili as one of the witnesses against Lacson.

Capili, then a reporter for the tabloid Remate, said he had seen policemen leading eight men with bound hands out of a "safe-house" in Paranaque.

The eight reportedly turned up among the 11 Kuratong gang members who were killed in the alleged shoot-out with police on Commonwealth Avenue, Quezon City, on May 17, 1995.

The DOJ will also try to contact Jane Gomez and SPO2 Corazon de la Cruz, former witnesses who recanted their testimonies, to testify in the re-trial, Zuñiga said. With Agnes E. Donato

I will survive, Lacson says of cases' revival

SEN. Panfilo Lacson yesterday expressed confidence he would weather the revived Kuratong Baleleng cases.

"I still believe in our criminal justice system, that is why I am filing a motion for reconsideration," Lacson said.

In short, he was counting on the Supreme Court to reverse its decision reopening of the infamous rubout case.

Lacson made the statement during the 35th commencement exercises of the Isabela State University in Ilagan, Isabela, where he was guest of honor.

In a press conference that followed, Lacson said he was not nervous about the high court's decision. "In the original case," he said, "we (were) not the principals."

He was referring to police generals Jewel Cansan, Romeo Acop and Francisco Zubia. In the case before Branch 81 of the Quezon City Regional Trial Court, the four had been charged as accessories.

The Department of Justice is trying to make it appear like an entirely different case, Lacson said. "How can that be, when they (justice officials) are using the same evidence, the same suspects and the same victims?" he asked. (See top story.)

Militant groups wondered why the cases were being revived only now.

"(This) delayed action taken by the Supreme Court has reduced the people's case to a mere fistfight between the Macapagal and Lacson camps," Fernando Hicap, chair of the Pambansang Lakas ng Kilusang Mambakaya ng Pilipinas (Pamalakaya) said yesterday, accusing Malacañang of exploiting the case to eliminate Lacson from the 2004 polls or get concessions from the senator. 'Kuratong' cops ordered relieved POLICE Director General Hermogenes Ebdane Jr. yesterday ordered the relief of police officials implicated in the Kuratong Baleleng case to ensure their presence at the trial.

The officials, he said, would be recalled from their present assignments and ordered to report to Headquarters Support Service at Camp Crame, Quezon City, so they would be easily available once the trial starts.

"It must be done because, if there is one, we want them available for the trial," Ebdane told reporters.

At least three of the more than 30 police officers charged in the case had optionally retired—former PNP chief Sen. Panfilo Lacson, Deputy Director General Jewel Cansan and Director Romeo Acop.

Cansan flew to the United States in February and has not returned, according to officials. Two accused, Senior Superintendents Michael Ray Aquino and Cesar Mancao, are also believed to be in the US after going "absent without official leave" (AWOL) in connection with the Salvador "Bubby" Dacer case.

Chief Supt. Francisco Zubia Jr. is on "floating" status but was assigned to the HSS.

The highest-ranking officials still in active service are Supt. Gil Meneses of the National Capital Region Police Office, Supt. Jose Erwin Villacorte of the Traffic Management Group in Laguna, and Senior Insp. Cesar Tannagan of Region V.

Another accused, Supt. Glenn Dumlaog, is in police Intelligence Group (IG) custody for his alleged involvement in the November 2000 kidnap-murder of publicist Dacer and his driver, Emmanuel Corbito. TJ Burgenio and Jerome Aning

'Tay, ang puso mo!

Are you 40 years old or older?

Do you exercise everyday?

Do you eat a balanced diet?

Is your waist getting bigger?

Maybe you should start taking COR-30 everyday?

Helps prevent Heart Attack!

Aspirin has been proven to help prevent heart attack. It helps reduce the number of "bad prostaglandins" in the blood. "Bad prostaglandins" are the reason why blood clots occur. These blood clots could help trigger a heart attack.

Less "side effects"

There are people who experience "side effects" like ulcer when taking aspirin. COR-30 is the "lowest dose" aspirin. Because of this, you can experience less or even no aspirin induced "side effects". However, being "low dose" does not necessarily mean "low efficacy". This does not diminish its ability to lessen "bad prostaglandins" in the blood and help protect you against heart attack.

COR-30 is made specially for the heart!

Heart ailments are expensive to treat! You are not the only one who will suffer but also your whole family. Help prevent it from happening by taking COR-30 everyday. Because of its very affordable price and effect on your body, it was made specially for you! Take one COR-30 everyday for your peace of mind against heart attack.

For more information, please call the COR-30 Hotline: 020-1911. Consult your doctor.

5 Pinoys acquitted of murder in Kuwait

By Michael Lim Ubar

FIVE Filipinos accused of murdering a Canadian have been acquitted by the Kuwaiti Supreme Court, the foreign affairs department announced yesterday.

The Kuwaiti Court of Cassation, the Kuwait's highest court, exonerated Mary Jane Bitos and four other Filipinos—Teody M. Tomaro, Jaime Vinuya, Rosalia Bacig and Noralsa T. Esick.

They had been accused of killing Canadian Luc Ethier in Kuwait.

"We receive messages of thanks from families for helping these Filipinos who have been falsely accused of murdering a Canadian national," said Foreign Secretary Blas Ople.

"So they can now be released from custody, and transported home safely," added Ople who disclosed that the Department of Foreign Affairs was now working for the immediate repatriation of the five.

"They have expressed their strong desire to return home, as their being in detention has caused them to lose their jobs in Kuwait," said Ople.

Ople said the acquittal came after four and five months of marathon hearings.

"Bitos and company were initially acquitted by the Kuwaiti Court of Appeals, but the (Kuwaiti) government prosecutors elevated the case to the SC," said Ople.

When informed of their acquittal, the five "expressed elation and expressed their deepest thanks and appreciation for all the assistance and concern that the Philippine government has accorded them," said Ambassador-designate to Kuwait Bayani V. Mangibin.

"The decision shows that justice prevails, no matter how long and how hard the path to finding the truth," said Mangibin.

Ople also announced that a Filipino worker in Cairo, Egypt, was repatriated to Manila on March 28 upon the consent of Egyptian authorities.

The Filipino, whose identity was withheld by the DFA, was charged with conniving a fellow worker who stole one million Egyptian pounds from their employers. She was acquitted.

Where are we now in PROPHECY?

About a third of the Holy Bible is prophecy. The Bible reveals a prophetic time line from the reign of King Nebuchadnezzar of the Babylonian Empire to the time of Jesus Christ leading to the end of the age and the eventual establishment of the Kingdom of God. The Bible accurately foretells specific events—in detail—many years, sometimes centuries and millennia, before they occur. Many of these prophecies are being fulfilled before our eyes.

Mindanao war creating new batch of rebels, expert says

By Carlito Pablo

THE WAR in Mindanao is creating a new generation of rebels—and possibly terrorists—among children traumatized by the conflict, a professor of psychiatry from the University of the Philippines said yesterday.

Dr. June Pagaduan-Lopez made the observation following her address to a forum on the "costs of war" in Mindanao sponsored by the Women's Business Council Philippines and The Outstanding Women in the Nation's Service.

Lopez, who is in charge of the psychological trauma and human rights program of the UP Center for Integrative and Development Studies, had recently worked with children of Pikit, North Cotabato, to help them deal with trauma.

Pikit was the site of heavy fighting recently between government forces and the Moro Islamic Liberation Front, when the military bombed then overran the MILF's main headquarters there, the Bulok Complex.

The assault resulted in the exodus of 40,163 families, or 214,072 individuals, who became refugees.

"Children are feeling a deep-seated anger against the government because of the war and this is creating a new generation of rebels and possibly terrorists," Lopez said.

She said the conflict in Mindanao continues to fuel the historic animosity of Filipino Muslims toward the national government, which they regard as a colonizing force.

"The forebears of these children were rebels and with what they are going through, they might well become rebels," she said. "What we have is a vicious cycle."

Lopez said hostilities between the government and the MILF have not ceased since the fighting erupted in the second week of February.

As of Wednesday, 36 children had died of disease in the cramped refugee camps, while 366 others were being treated. In all, some 40,000 refugees remain at the camps because ongoing skirmishes keep them from going home.

"There are schoolchildren, nine to 11 years old, who think the proper way to grow up is to become a rebel," Lopez said. "Children there are now thinking that violence is the only way for them."

She said the population at large affected by the war are also "angry at the government and feel a sense of betrayal."

Unless these feelings are addressed, she said, any efforts by the government to undertake rehabilitation and development programs in the war-ravaged areas would not succeed.

"It's like (US President George W.) Bush telling the Iraqis, 'we'll rehabilitate Iraq after we destroy you,'" Lopez said.

At the forum, Secretary Teresita Deles, convener of the Malacañang-led National Anti-Poverty Commission, admitted there had been "quite bloody" discussions in the Cabinet regarding the military offensive in North Cotabato.

Deles, who is identified with the civil society bloc and is counted among the "doves" in government, said that since the fighting had run its course, it was the responsibility of the government to provide the resources for rehabilitation.

"We must win the peace piece-by-piece," she said.

Business willing to fund anti-corruption drive—SWS

By Juliet Labog-Javelana

THE BUSINESS community is willing to finance an anti-corruption drive in the government but admits that it needs to set the example by correcting widespread dishonesty in business practices.

A survey conducted by the Social Weather Stations found out that most businesses were willing to give 2 percent of their net income to fund a campaign to reduce corruption in the country by half within 10 years.

Sixty percent of 500 top and middle-managers surveyed said if government corruption could be reduced to the level of Singapore, their net income would rise as a result.

The business community, however, prefers that the private sector, rather than the government, manage such a fund.

But at the same time, the enterprise managers revealed a high prevalence of dishonest business practices in their ranks. Only 35 percent said that all companies in their sector issue receipts while 18 percent said that all in their sector keep only one set of accounts. Only 11 percent said that all in their sector pay taxes honestly.

A significant 72 percent report having been asked for a bribe in connection with taxes or licenses and 35 percent in connection to a government transaction. For both categories, only 5 percent reported the incident with the most common excuse being "nothing would happen anyway." (Related story, B20)

Bribery

Fifty-seven percent said that most, if not all, companies in their sector use bribes to get public sector contracts while 30 percent said bribes were used to clinch private sector deals.

"Most respondents place the bribery allotment for government contracts at 20 percent (of the project cost), and the bribery allotment for private sector contracts at 10 percent," SWS head Mahar Mangahas said in his report on the October 2002 to February 2003 survey.

Some 88 percent of the managers said that their company makes it a practice to give gifts, such as Christmas raffle prizes, to government agencies, with 23 percent giving at least P100,000 worth of gifts a year.

Fifty-four percent said their company gives additional donations in an election year, with 24 percent giving at least P100,000 and 8 percent giving at least P1 million worth.

From a list of government agencies, managers gave "very good" (over +50) net sincerity rating in fighting corruption to the Supreme Court, the Securities and Exchange Commission and the health and budget departments.

A net sincerity rating is the percentage of those who consider the agency sincere in fighting corruption minus the percentage of those who consider it insincere.

The education department, the barangay government, the Office of the President and the Sandiganbayan got good (+31 to +50) ratings. The Ombudsman, the Commission on Audit, the justice department and their city or municipal government got moderate (+11 to +30) ratings.

2 firms clinch Comelec deals worth P1.3B

By Blanche S. Rivera

A FORMER member of the Photokina-led consortium bagged the P1-billion validation project that would form the first phase of poll modernization.

Another consortium, the Philippine Multi-Media Systems Inc. (PMMSI), won the bidding for the P300 million electronic transmission project.

Commission on Elections chair Benjamin Abalos Sr. said yesterday he has signed the notices of award for French firm Sagem and PMMSI early this week.

Abalos said the technology offered by the two firms were recommended by the technical working group of the Comelec.

The winning bidder for the 2,500 automated machines for counting and canvassing has yet to be determined.

Abalos said that the Department of Science and Technology is still evaluating two firms who are vying for the P1.7-billion automation project.

"They (commissioners) have given me the authority to issue the notice of award upon the recommendation of the technical group," Abalos said.

But the Comelec chair added that the contract, which would be based on the notice of award, would be ratified by the en banc.

Sagem was one of two firms which had earlier requested the amendment of the initial rules for bidding issued by the Comelec, which stated that only Filipino majority-owned firms may participate in the bidding.

It used to be part of the consortium that won the award for the controversial P6.5-billion Voters Registration and Identification System (VRIS).

The deal for VRIS, whose technology is similar to what is needed for validation, was junked by the Supreme Court last year.

The Comelec would validate the voters' lists in areas where there are persistent reports of electoral fraud and cheating. Continuing registration has been suspended.

The data-capturing machines for validation would take and store digital photos, fingerprints and personal data of the voters.

The electronic transmission gadgets, on the other hand, would be interfaced with the counting machines for faster communication of the election results.

The agencies with mediocre (-11 to +11) ratings are the Presidential Commission on Good Government, the Presidential Anti-Graft Commission, the trial courts and the Senate. Poor (-11 to -30) ratings went to the Land Transportation Office, the House of Representatives and the environment department. The Philippine National Police stood out as the sole agency with a bad (-31 to -50) rating while the very bad (below -50) are the Bureau of Internal Revenue, the Department of Public Works and Highways and the Bureau of Customs.

The managers were split on the business prospects for next year. Twenty-nine percent see good or excellent prospects, 42 percent see fair, 29 percent see poor or very poor prospects.

The survey involved 500 managers from 214 companies randomly drawn from the 1,500 largest corporations and 286 from the small and medium enterprises. Top and mid-level managers were interviewed.

Most of the findings were similar to an earlier survey, the SWS said.

Explosive

FOUR weeks after the bombing near the Davao airport that left 22 people dead and more than 130 others wounded, another bomb went off near the city's Sasa wharf Wednesday, killing 16 people and injuring at least 40 others. Among those killed in the second blast were an eight-month-old baby, a 6-year-old boy and a nun. The two shocking and cruel terrorist attacks in as many months seem to have shattered the city's claim to being an oasis of peace in the strife-torn corner of the country.

EDITORIAL

But while government officials were quick to point a finger at the Moro Islamic Liberation Front for the March 4 blast, they have been more careful and deliberate in assigning blame this time. Once burned, twice shy, perhaps. Three days after the first blast, the government filed charges of multiple murder against the top MILF leadership and more than 140 others. Among those charged were two relatives of the alleged bomber who turned out to be part of a big group of family members welcoming home an overseas Filipino worker. It now appears that the government had very little by way of hard evidence against those it had charged in court.

Maybe it helped cool down the hotheads, who are always ready to "solve" great crimes by rounding up the usual suspects instead of catching the real culprits, that the lines of communication to the MILF leadership had been reopened or that the process of restarting the peace talks has begun. Thus, the MILF leadership was able to assure the government quickly that it had nothing to do with the latest atrocity and even to offer help in investigating it.

Taking the MILF out of the picture hardly simplifies the problem. With no group coming forward to claim responsibility for the bombings, government investigators are left guessing as to their identity or identities. Davao City Mayor Rodrigo Duterte, who was named crisis manager after the March 4 bombing, earlier blamed that blast on what he called a special urban terrorist action group of the MILF, a charge that was denied by the separatist group. Now investigators seem inclined to believe that another group was behind the second bombing. Separate groups carrying out terrorist attacks independently may be more than what an already beleaguered Macapagal administration can handle.

And yet there's even greater urgency now to get to the bottom of this recent spate of bombings. Early yesterday morning, hooded men hurled bombs or grenades and shot up three mosques in Davao, wounding at least 14 people. The attacks, coming just hours after the Sasa wharf blast, bore unmistakable signs of a reprisal for the earlier bombing. Even Duterte, who has a reputation for taking extralegal measures against criminals, was alarmed over this fresh outbreak of violence with its religious undertones. "We don't need revenge," he said.

But first the bombings must be stopped and those responsible for the previous blasts must be brought to justice. Then people will not think of seeking revenge. The authorities have to do much more and do it fast before the situation spins out of control. Davao, which has a history of vigilantism against communist rebels and more recently drug pushers, may be headed for a much bloodier conflict, one that could turn it into another Beirut or Belfast of the recent past.

The real villain

COLLATERAL damage is military-speak for the unintended consequences of war, specifically, dead and wounded civilians. Unfortunately there is no way in war to avoid civilian carnage, no matter how careful the battle plan. Our precision-guided bombs, while extremely accurate, aren't infallible.

The coalition's accidentally inflicted civilian death toll, though, will pale compared to what the Iraqi regime causes on purpose. Iraqi soldiers are using mosques, day-care centers and neighborhoods for cover. They have commandeered human shields to protect themselves, marching them toward British troops, then firing from behind them before retreating, according to a British spokesperson. And if the Republican Guard resorts to fighting with chemical weapons, you'd better believe Iraq's civilians are on their own.

Coalition forces are doing everything possible to avoid civilian deaths, even drawing criticism in some quarters for putting soldiers at increased risk. Balancing risks to civilians and coalition forces is "a constant calculation," said Joint Chiefs of Staff Chair Gen. Richard Myers.

Yet it's a necessary one. It's important for Iraqi citizens and, indeed, the world, to understand once and for all who the real villain is in this war. That ought to be an easy calculation.

Midsummer thoughts: The old waterhole is gone

IN MIDSUMMER, when the temperature soars and the sun seems to be too bright, people's fancies turn to beaches cooled by surf and sea breezes, to snoozing in a shady nook in the backyard with a cold glass of lemonade, to the old waterhole in the old hometown. A photograph in yesterday's INQUIRER of Japanese boating under banks of cherry blossoms led me to think about our family compound in Malabon.

It was like an island surrounded by fishponds. And leaning over the fishponds were big kakawati trees that, at about this time of the year, unfurled profuse pale-pink blossoms just like the cherry blossoms of Japan. As the blossoms matured, they dropped into the water and so you had a profusion of pink among the trees above the ponds, pink reflected in the water, and actual pink blossoms floating on it.

We could jump into the ponds anytime but they were too shallow to swim in, although our pet ducks used them as their private swimming hole. Our own old waterhole was nearby, the Catmon River, over which was a wooden bridge.

The river was not only our swimming hole, it was our playground. Living so close to a river, children in our neighborhood learned to swim almost as soon as they learned to walk. When the tide was up, the river echoed with laughter and shouts as almost all the children of the neighborhood swam and played there.

Along the banks of the river and ponds grew mangrove trees and the big kalapinay trees leaning over the water. We would climb up the branches and dive into the water. Or we would tie a rope to a stout branch and swing out above the water a la Tarzan and drop into the water. Or we would use the bridge as a diving platform.

When the tide started to go out, we would move over to the concrete water gates through which water passed in or out of the ponds, so that the pond water was always fresh. Forget to change the water even once and the bangus fingerlings die. The water was always deeper around these water gates.

We played tag, chasing one another among the branches and roots of the mangrove trees. We could run among the roots sticking out of the mud to support the trunks like buttresses and climb the branches like monkeys. We would go home with our bodies full of scratches from the branches but the salt water acted as an antiseptic and healed them almost immediately.

AS I SEE IT

Among the roots of the mangroves, many crabs made their homes. You could see them sunning themselves on the roots or on the steps and sides of the water gates, but when you got near, they scurried into their holes. So we would pile into bancas with our slingshots and plenty of pebbles and glide along the mangroves and take potshots at the crabs. We missed most of the time but sometimes we made a direct hit and took unlucky crabs home for dinner.

During low tide, expert fishermen patrolled the banks with long steel poles and digging tools looking for holes of big crabs, the alimango which you buy in the wet market. It was easy to know if a crab was inside the hole; you could see its clawmarks in the mud at the entrance. The fisherman called mandurukot (in the city he would be mistaken for a pickpocket) then went to work.

With the long steel pole bent at right angles at the end, he poked into the hole to feel for the crab. Most of the time, the hole went this way and that, and a straight pole was blocked. So the mandurukot used his digging tools to make the hole bigger so he could manipulate his pole better.

Shrimps buried themselves in the mud along the edge of the mangrove growths. At low tide, if you have good eyesight, you could see their eyes sticking out of the mud and it was easy to catch them. If you could not, you groped in the mud and you could feel their bodies.

Kingfishers also made the mangroves their playground. You could see the blue, blue-green, and white birds with long red beaks perched on the branches, watching the water for fish. Now and then, one would dart into the water and return to its perch with a fish struggling in its beak. For these birds, we made traps.

We fashioned these traps out of bamboo, string and strips of rubber from the car's inner tubes. Through a tiny hole in the bamboo stick, a piece of string tied to the rubber strip was inserted, then the hole was plugged with a small stick of bamboo. The end of the string was draped over this horizontal stick like a noose. The pole was pointed so the bird could not perch on it. Instead, it was expected to perch on that horizontal stick. When it did, the stick fell from the bird's weight and the noose was sprung around its leg. The bird, later freed, became a pet.

Those were the good old days when the Malabon rivers were clean, where we could bathe and play and catch food anytime. Not anymore. Pollution has killed not only the rivers but also the fishponds they served and the livelihood of fishermen who depended on them. If you accidentally fall into the river now, you'd probably die of poisoning. The fishponds have been filled up with dirt and sold as residential lots. Our compound is no longer surrounded by fishponds and kakawati trees, but high adobe walls of neighboring lot owners.

The Catmon River and the Tenejeros-Tulahan River from which it branches is a perfect example of what happens to waterways if government officials, local and national, allow businessmen and squatters to do their thing and pollute the rivers. Greedy and irresponsible businessmen unloaded their effluents into the river and squatters made the river their own private toilets and garbage dump. And so we now have once pristine rivers as smelly, dirty and shameful open sewers.

THERE'S THE RUB

Conrado de Quiros

ty of about 45,000 jobs for Filipinos in postwar Iraq. How she came to this figure, I do not know. But it shows a callous President who cares nothing about trotting about an imagined economic advantage of the war for her country while ignoring the millions of Iraqis who are dying and the dire economic consequences of war to poor countries like ours.

"President Macapagal would be well-advised to keep her mouth shut on the subject to avoid further damage and embarrassment to the country."

Villar says we should not premise the hiring of Filipinos abroad on canine loyalty to America but on talent. "Contractors and employers will get skilled workers from any country, whether or not it supported the war," Lozada, on the other hand, says there is no assurance Filipinos will get priority in rebuilding Iraq. "Besides, there is no guarantee the United States will win the war."

Well, you go by history you'll know that the rewards for the loyal are not only extremely speculative, they are completely unwarranted. At least for countries like ours. This country fought for America over and beyond the call of duty during World War II, and all it got for its pains was to have rehabilitation funds tagged to making Americans equal to Filipino citizens in the Philippines. It was Japan and Germany—the enemies—that got rebuilt. This country may not forget Bataan and Corregidor, but America does, until it's time to pull them out of the attic and dust them off.

But Lozada and Villar miss the point. The point is not merely that it's foolish to count chickens before they are hatched, it's that it is foolish to do so while exposing the current hens to an impending plague. For those who do not like metaphors, that means that it is not only foolish to talk of future jobs in Iraq, it is that it is foolish to do so while courting expulsion for the OFWs currently working in the Middle East.

I don't know where GMA gets her breathtaking myopia. Surely Malacañang has access to more sources of information than CNN. Just surf through cable TV—which include German (DW) and French channels (TV 5) and various Asian and Arab channels—and though most of it is not in English, its images must tell you the real story about the war. It must also tell you about the fury of the world about that war, in the Middle East above all. Ironically, Iraq's most lethal weapon has turned out the pictures of its dead.

The fear that the war might engulf the region has become real. Donald Rumsfeld has already accused Syria and Iran of coming to the aid of Baghdad, which the two countries have angrily condemned and seen as signs of impending aggression against them. Arab governments that have been silent about the war, hoping to appease their own publics while maintaining good relations with Washington, are under immense pressure to reflect public sentiment.

You have a situation like that, and you think crowing about future jobs for Filipinos in a "liberated Iraq" is not going to grate on Arab ears? You can only hope we are too insignificant to be noticed or that "the more educated Arabs" realize GMA is not OFW and ne'er the twain shall meet. Manny Villar is wrong there too. The way emotions are running high in the Gulf today, skills are not bound to be the determining factor in the hiring and firing of OFWs over the next few years. When I got the e-mail above from our OFW in Saudi, the killing of several Iraqi women and children at an American checkpoint hadn't yet happened, and pictures of it hadn't yet come out on TV and the newspapers.

My letter-writer from the Middle East has every reason to fume. The way his President is carrying on, getting fired may be the least of their worries.

The right to a decent start in life

COMMENTARY

Dr. Shigeru Omi

ASIA'S children are in the greatest danger in the very places they should be safest—at home, at school and in their local community. Each year, more than a million infants in the region die before reaching their fifth birthday, nearly always because of illnesses related to problems in the environment they live in. It is a chilling scenario, and one that is completely unacceptable.

Wherever people live in poverty, it is the children who suffer the most. In their growing years, they experience "windows of susceptibility," when their fragile systems are open to attack from germs, worms and disease-bearing insects. Millions of youngsters contract acute respiratory illnesses in their very own homes, from breathing in the fumes from open fires used for cooking and heating or from tobacco smoke. These dangers are aggravated by such factors as conflicts, natural and man-made disasters, sexual abuse and social and gender inequities.

The World Health Organization (WHO) has dedicated this year's World Health Day, on April 7, to the cause of Healthy Environments for Children. WHO believes that every child has the right to live, learn and play in safety and good health. Is this goal achievable? Sadly, the answer is not yet—not until the link between poverty and disease is snapped.

In times of sickness, families without assets do not even attempt to seek treatment. Those who have some possessions will sell them to raise money or may use them as security to borrow money at high rates of interest. The consequences for household incomes are devastating, tipping families into an irreversible downward spiral of greater poverty, more health problems and destitution. On all health indicators, the poor fare worse than the better-off. Children living in absolute poverty are five times more likely than others to die before the age of 5. Potentially deadly infections, such as HIV/AIDS, malaria, tuberculosis and diarrheal diseases all disproportionately affect the poor. Malnutrition is a constant threat.

At the same time, the delivery of health care is often profoundly anti-poor. The majority of health personnel are found in urban areas, while most of the poor live in rural communities. Financial resources favor hospital-based curative care, whereas the poor need accessible and affordable primary care. Funding is usually directed toward personal medical care, although the poor benefit most from broad public-health measures such as clean water and sanitation.

More than 100 million children in the Western Pacific—a region that encompasses 37 countries and areas—do not have access to clean water. The contaminated water they drink or in which their food is cooked is putting their lives at risk through the effects of diarrhea and other intestinal problems. How much more effective—and compassionate—it would be to provide clean water rather than try to deal with the consequences of its absence.

If things continue this way, the future will be an even more dangerous place for Asia's children. More than 7 million people in the Western Pacific suffer from health problems caused by indoor pollution. By 2010, that figure will have risen to over 12 million. At home much of the time, children will be the most affected.

Each day, up to 50,000 young Asians start smoking. At this rate, possibly a quarter of all young men now smoking, will eventually die from tobacco use.

Garbage is another peril. An average urban area in the Western Pacific region produces half a million tons of solid waste each year. By 2010, there will be nearly twice that amount. When not disposed of safely, garbage harbors mosquitoes—bringing with them the threat of dengue fever.

For governments, the costs of greater health problems will be monumental. Health services will be overwhelmed. Sustainable economic development will be jeopardized.

But none of this is inevitable. Environment-related disease can be controlled, even in the poorest countries. What is needed is a holistic approach, where delivering healthy environments involves much more than the efforts of just the health authorities. Other government departments, such as economic planning, housing, energy and water, must also play their part, along with community leaders, parents and teachers. So, too, must international bodies.

The WHO is helping to make this happen. Together with other United Nations bodies, civil-society groups, governments and various other agencies, it recently formed the Healthy Environments for Children Alliance. This multi-institutional grouping, with expertise in a wide range of health-oriented activities, will bring synergistic solutions to problems that cannot be resolved with one single remedy. It will also advocate globally for increased funds to promote healthy environments for children, and help ensure the right tools and the best possible knowledge are available at the local level.

It is early days still for the Healthy Environments for Children Alliance, but, with the right will, it could mean genuine hope for tomorrow's children. The alternatives do not bear thinking about.

Dr. Shigeru Omi is regional director of the Western Pacific region of the World Health Organization.

AT LARGE

Rina Jimenez-David

Award for "Bowling for Columbine," and so I had no speech prepared. I'm not much of a speech-preparer anyway. Besides, I had already received awards in the days leading up to the Oscars and used the same acceptance remarks...

The majority of Americans, according to polls, want stronger environmental laws, support Roe vs. Wade and did not want to go into this war without the backing of the United Nations. That is where the country is at. It's liberal. It's for peace and it is only tacitly in support of its leader because that is what you are supposed to do when you are at war and you want your kids to come back from Iraq alive. In the commercial break before the "best documentary" Oscar was to be announced, I suddenly thought that maybe this community of film people was also part of the American majority and just might have voted for my film, which, in part, takes on the Bush administration for manipulating the public with fear so it can conduct its acts of aggression against the Third World. I leaned over to my fellow nominees and told them that, should I win, I was going to say something about President George W. Bush and the war, and would they like to join me up on the stage? They all agreed.

MOMENTS later, Diane Lane opened the envelope and announced the winner:

"Bowling for Columbine." The entire main floor rose to its feet for a standing ovation. I was immeasurably moved and humbled as I motioned for the other nominees to join my wife (the film's producer) and me up on the stage.

I then said what I had been saying all week at those other awards ceremonies. I guess a few other people had heard me say those things too because before I had finished my first sentence about the fictitious president, a couple of men (some reported it was "stagehands" just to the left of me) near a microphone started some loud yelling. Then a group in the upper balcony joined in. What was so confusing to me, as I continued my remarks, was that I could hear this noise but, looking out on the main floor, I didn't see a single person booing. But then the majority in the balcony—who were in support of my remarks—started booing the boosers.

It all turned into one humongous cacophony of yells. And all I'm thinking is: Hey, I put on a tux for this?

Was it appropriate? To me, the inappropriate thing would have been to say nothing at all or to thank my agent, my lawyer and the designer who dressed me—Sears Roebuck. I made a movie about the American desire to use violence both at home and around the world. My remarks were in keeping with exactly what my film was about.

AND, as I walked up to the stage, I was still thinking about the lessons that morning at Mass. About how silence, when you observe wrongs being committed, is the same as committing those wrongs yourself. And so I followed my conscience and my heart.

On the way back home to Flint, Mich., the day after the Oscars, two flight attendants told me how they had gotten stuck overnight in Flint with no flight—and wound up earning only $30 for the day because they are paid by the hour.

They said they were telling me this in the hope that I would tell others. Because they, and the millions like them, have no voice... They are the American majority who are being asked to send their sons and daughters over to Iraq to possibly die so Bush's buddies can have the oil.

Who will speak for them if I don't? That's what I try to do, every day of my life, and March 23—though it was one of the greatest days of my life and an honor I will long cherish—was no different.

Except I made the mistake of beginning it in a church.

What's new about Balagtas?

LOOKING BACK

Ambeth R. Ocampo

promise to do during the Holy Week. Cristobal in his lecture "Wrestling with Balagtas" said:

"...I am but a wanderer in the dark and fearful forest of Balagtas' epic, having learned about it in my high school days, with but a single verse lodged in memory. It runs like this, as some of you might recall: Ang laki sa layaw, karaniwa'y hubad, walang karonsilyo't labas ang bayag. I will not patronize a great poet by translating his lines into English. Let those who can't read Tagalog go to St. Juan's English translation and there swim in the abstruse explications that sap the juice out of Balagtas' substance..."

That was enough to keep me awake the rest of the lecture and made me go through my own memory for names long learned but seldom used: Juana Tiambeng, Baltazar Narvaez, Maria Asuncion Rivera, Celia, etc. Reading up on Balagtas made me wonder why everything we seem to know about his life can only be traced back to a 1916 study by Epifanio de los Santos, Balagtas y su Florante. And even then the man memorialized by Edsa drew much of his information from Herminigildo Cruz's "Kung sino ang Kumata ng Florante Kasaysayan ng Buhay ni Francisco Baltazar at Pag-uulat nang Kanyang Karunungan" (Manila: Libreria Manila Pilatelia 1906). Hasn't any fresh primary research been done on Balagtas, if only to trace the documentation and verify the information of Cruz?

For example, Cruz reproduced the baptismal record that says that Francisco Balagtas was baptized on April 30, 1788 and that his parents were Juan Balagtas and Juana Cruz. How come we celbrate on April 2 when the document does not provide information on the age of the child brought in for baptism? We are also told that Balagtas had a brother, Felipe, and two sisters Concha and Nicolasa. Last Wednesday I hoped to interview a descendant of these people but no one was available to answer why the poet also goes under the surnames Baltazar or Narvaez Baltazar.

The marriage certificate, also reproduced by Cruz states that: Francisco (now) Baltazar, son of Juan Baltazar and Juana de la Cruz, married Juana Tiambeng, daughter of the Chinese mestizo couple Juan Tiambeng and Dominga Rodriguez in Orion, Bataan on July 22, 1842. The explanation is that Balagtas was dropped when the Claveria Decree of 1849 giving Filipinos surnames, was implemented. All we know is that after two decades of marriage, our prolific poet produced 11 children.

We have more obscure information. Before his marriage he courted two women from Tondo named Bianang and Lucena. That he moved to Pandacan, a district then known for artists and musicians, sometime in 1835 or 1836, and lived in the house of Pedro Sulit. He is said to have worn camisa de canton crudo or piña embroidered in Hagonoy. He also preferred silk pants made in Baliuag known as "tatapisin," whatever that means. It is suggested that he was unjustly imprisoned in 1838 because he was a rival for the hand of Celia, the woman he hid under the initials "M.A.R." We don't know how long he was imprisoned, we don't know what crime he allegedly committed but it seems that contrary to popular belief, he did not write "Florante at Laura" in prison at this time.

So many old questions with no new answers forthcoming. If Balagtas 2003 had any impact on me at all, it is to accept that we need new research instead of repeating century-old data.

'Cooked books' and a hunted man

"I CANNOT reconcile the Jess Tibayan I know with his companies' books," says SEC Chair Lilia Bautista, empathizing with an alleged scammer's rise from the bottom to the top of the heap—much like hers, she says—with faith in the Divine and sheer hard work creating their own luck.

But next she frowns, "He had 92 companies. How can you believe that?" Auditing the Tibayan group of companies at the man's own request through a good part of 2002, the Securities and Exchange Commission found many non-operational offices in expensive spaces, says Compliance and Enforcement director Tomas Syquia. With many affidavits of non-operation submitted, the SEC began to wonder where the money for high interest rates to investors was coming from if Tibayan was not just another pyramid artist. Twelve of those 92 books they opened were "cooked," says the SEC. "They solicited billions in investments and were going through elaborate measures not to declare them."

COMMENTARY

On such findings, a Cease and Desist Order was served on the Tibayan Group of Investment Companies on Jan. 29. "The bottom line is money," says Celia Sandejas, legal counsel of the Anti-Money Laundering Council (AMLC) under the Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas, about the accompanying freeze of bank accounts identified with scams and alleged scammers. "We're not too sure they had bad intentions but most of the time, Ponzi nga. We freeze the accounts anyway because in the past, starting with G. Cosmos, we were always making hahol. Now we try to be pro-active."

Billions of pesos and millions of dollars of money suddenly locked in vaults, sealed like the lips of the AMLC on the exact amounts frozen, has been uniformly followed by the disappearance of alleged Ponzis a.k.a. pyramiders. What was the investing public to think but that they had fled with ill-gotten wealth in hand? Panic and hysteria have led an army of emotions shared by government officials despite themselves. "It's blood money," Syquia says darkly, adding that individual investors' tales of need and desperation have been "emotionally draining" on him, too.

Thousands have rushed to the SEC, the National Bureau of Investigation, the Department of Justice, the police and the courts to file complaints. There, a long and winding road opened, fraught with more strain and expense to get back mostly hard-earned savings, in many cases for life and death urgencies. Several dangers lay in the legal machinery itself. In clogged dockets with an underpaid bureaucracy vulnerable to bribery and foot-dragging, civil cases would take four to six years to be awarded damages, 8 to 10 years for criminal cases if they go all the way to the Supreme Court. Then there are lawyers' fees, the largest expense, with enough investors to spawn a special breed of legal vulture circling the bodies under fallen pyramids.

Those are not the only perils. Bit by bit it emerges that another danger both to investors and alleged scammers comes from law enforcers themselves. In and around the NBI, ironically under the justice umbrella, are traces of criminal elements working with well-connected investors bent on extra-legal "collection of what's due" or independently grabbing booty as CDO enforcers, shrinking a huge kitty belonging to many. Other than Ma. Teresa Santos' safe busted open by policemen-investors "getting our money back," we have yet to hear of PNP robbery. The attempt of Police Gen. Romeo Maganto to arrest Rose Baladajay within Senate premises was however not a flattering portrait of what the PNP elements are capable of.

The state of Philippine law and order is what made the ongoing Jaworski hearings at the Senate a lifeline, with millions of potential votes for the one national figure doggedly taking the cudgels to recover investor money. That a good part of this money, large enough to surprise the senators, is perhaps not lost but frozen is a first ray of light coming through clouds of panic, possible misjudgment in the SEC, shadowy NBI moves, and investors' fears of finding little or nothing, after SEC penalties and lawyers' fees, in the end.

But Sen. Robert Jaworski's commanding view widens by the day. Coming to light, for instance, is that pyramids varied in extent, method and working environment, based on their CEOs' style. At the last hearing on March 28, things began moving faster as well with the repayment plan presented by Ma. Teresa Santos and Ervin Mateo's promise to submit his own soon, lawyers around his prison cell.

The first appearance of two Tibayan officials also beamed the spotlight on TGIC's own repayment plan to investors whose total number cannot be independently verified, its papers hidden with officers in hiding like the boss. The moment ripens for the reappearance of Jesus V. Tibayan himself. With the right questions and answers, SEC Chair Bautista stands a chance of finally making up her mind about him.

Meanwhile, here's a thought. Among Tibayan's investors are crack auditors, some of them even, surprise! SEC examiners. Why can't Bautista allow an independent "people power" team from their ranks into those 80 other books an understaffed SEC had not examined before a CDO was issued, perhaps even reviewing those they did? It would set a great example of transparency begetting more transparency and the gradual return of good will between enforcer and enforced upon, to the relief of thousands of victimized investors caught between them.

And, if the Malaysian Medical Practitioners Berhad (MMPB) is for real and at the eve of a voluntary limited partnership with TGIC, for which Tibayan's main condition is repayment of investors with its new capital infusion, a win-win scenario could be unfolding. MMPB managing director Parimalan says, "Pity Mr. Tibayan wasn't ready when I first offered him a merger two years ago. He could have avoided all this trouble. I like his view of development. He has vision."

What if he's right?

Women in war

WHILE the face of the US military is more "gender inclusive," the reality is as mixed and in some cases, contrived as ever.

Take President Bush's recent pep talk to the Central Command at its headquarters in Florida, for example. I couldn't help but notice that four of the seven soldiers seated directly behind and to the side of the president—in full TV camera view at all times—were women.

Whether this "positioning" was by accident or design can only be speculated upon, but somehow it looked like a set-up for public consumption, in the United States especially, where women's "role" in the military has always been a bone of contention, especially in combat situations.

In a missile battery, for example, just two days earlier in Iraq, a female officer in charge pushed the wrong button, sending a Patriot missile slamming into a British warplane by accident, killing both occupants.

Another news story the day before reported the heroics of a female pilot who landed her damaged aircraft safely without navigational equipment. A feat, I am told, that would cause "bladder control" problems for even the baddest male pilots.

Unfortunately for the disgraced missile battery officer, the skill and courage of her "sister," the pilot, won't be enough to quiet the military naysayers looking for

Will Maynilad restore R. Magsaysay Boulevard?

THE MAYNILAD Water Co. excavated the stretch of Vicente G. Cruz Street from Firmeza Street to R. Magsaysay Boulevard for their pipe-laying project from early 2000 to late 2002.

For almost two years the stretch of Vicente G. Cruz Street has been rendered impassable to vehicles. Now that the roadworks have stopped, the street still hasn't been restored to its previous condition before Maynilad dug it up. But when one calls up Maynilad's hotline, they insist that the project has been completed and that the road has been restored.

Vicente G. Cruz Street was a well-paved concrete road before Maynilad started the pipe-laying project. Not anymore, particularly the stretch nearing R. Magsaysay Boulevard. The rainy season is just a couple of months away. Please, will someone look into this matter?

Thanks for KitKat

MY family wishes to extend our great appreciation and sincerest thanks to the INQUIRER and the people there for the support they have extended to us by featuring us in the INQUIRER. That served as the instrument of God in touching the hearts of readers who willingly offered financial/moral support to us in dealing with great uncertainties concerning Kitkat's health. Their prayers and comforting words somehow eased the fear within us, knowing that many cared for her.

We just can't ignore the generosity of our benefactors for Kitkat's non-surgical operation, specifically the Burke UST Foundation for Cardiology with its chair, Edouardo Mialhe, who had been very supportive all the way to Kitkat (she being the first recipient of the said foundation), and to PCSO Chair Livia S. de Leon for her immediate action and assistance to us.

Also to Dr. Jose Jonas del Rosario of St. Luke's Medical Center for his untiring effort, patience and guidance; to kind-hearted friends, relatives and colleagues and to those who don't want to be known but did help us a lot, especially Sir Teddy and Ma'am Letty.

To our provincial governor, Jose Ma. R. Zubiri, Rep. Miguel E. Zubiri, Mayor Florencio T. Flores Jr. and Mayor Jose M. Galarzo Jr., city mayors of Malaybalay and Valencia, respectively, for their support.

We would also like to acknowledge the Chinese General Hospital and Medical Center for offering assistance to us, as well as the Philippine Heart Foundation.

Above all, we want to thank the INQUIRER because all of these things wouldn't be realized without its support to us. Again, thanks a lot and more power to all of you there.

Don't expect these bunch of couch potato warmongers to be in the thick of battle. They prefer to be on the sideline like the cheerleaders of the Dallas Cowboys with their pom-poms. Easy for them to be brave when they're not in harm's way. They're cheering this war like the Superbowl, which I find totally horrific! Easy also for others to cheer especially when they don't have a family member in Iraq right now. I saw on the news footage hours ago my friend sitting on his tank...Jesus! I hope his wife and kids saw the news footage and saw that he was okay. Every time I check the lists of CNN for updates I always say a prayer before looking at the site. I don't want to see the name of six people I know on that list.

US Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld during his morning briefing with the press, was ducking questions and started finger-pointing. He's now saying he's not the planner of the war. What a sudden shift!—Jeslie American "unilateralism." That's what's bothersome about America. The creation of an International Criminal Court would have been a good idea, but not to the Americans. Other despicable records include: bad environmental degradation policies, arms sales, continued use of land mines—the United Nations be damned.

American citizens are obliged to voice their displeasure over foreign and domestic policies. This is not "hating" America. This is part of the freedoms men die for. People see what's good with this country, but they also see things which are unpleasant to them. We cannot go about our lives like lemmings. You have your ideas, we have ours.

"This is it," as one US Marine general put it in expressing the order that the final ground push on Baghdad has already begun.

But grim as it may be, grimmer still is the reality that Saddam Hussein or his subordinates may also finally give the order to use biochemical or even nuclear weapons against the oncoming US and British forces once the so-called "red line" is crossed.

The world now waits with bated breath for the next turn of events in this war.—Rolly S.

Do US citizens feel safer now that Bush attacked Iraq unilaterally? Bush claimed as justification for this war, that by invading Iraq, terrorism will be put on check (at least), right?

The best recruiter of Islamic fundamentalists turned out to be Bush, himself! And later on, the Americans will surely see an increase rather than a decrease, in attacks by fanatics due to Bush's actions!

Weapons of mass destruction? No longer the issue right now! Later, the main objective is now focused on regime change through political assassination (oops! I mean decapitation operation... or was it target of opportunity?)—piping dilat

Iraqis, not US, must run Iraq—Blair

LONDON—Iraq must be governed by Iraqis as soon as the US-led war to overthrow President Saddam Hussein is over, British Prime Minister Tony Blair said on Wednesday.

"Iraq in the end should not be run by the Americans, should not be run by the British, should not be run by any outside force or power," he told MPs in his weekly question period in the House of Commons.

Blair went on to say that Britain had "absolutely no plans" to invade Syria or Iran, while adding that it would be unacceptable for either of those countries to help Iraq fight coalition forces.

The declarations came after US Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld on Friday accused Damascus of supplying Iraq with weapons and Iran of backing Iraqi rebels.

"We maintain relations with both those countries to make sure those things do not happen," Blair said.

"It's important, particularly in relation to Iran, to recognize we are in constant contact with them in order to make sure that this situation is not exacerbated in any way."

During a radio interview with the BBC on Wednesday, Foreign Secretary Jack Straw was keen to stress London's cooperation with Tehran: "Iran is a completely different country and situation from Iraq. Iran is an emerging democracy and there would be no case whatsoever for taking any kind of action."

"We have had good cooperation from the Iranian government (...) and the Iranians have more reason to know of the terror imposed by Saddam Hussein, not just on his own people, but on other peoples in the region, than almost any other country including Kuwait."

"So far as Syria is concerned (...) we have worked hard to try to improve relations," he added.

Straw was traveling Wednesday to Berlin, then on to Nato headquarters in Brussels, for talks focusing on post-war Iraq and its reconstruction.

In parliament, Blair reiterated Britain's determination to see that any interim post-war administration in Iraq is endorsed by the United Nations, amid concern that Washington intends to put Americans in charge in Baghdad.

Post-war Iraq should be run "by Iraqi people on basis of a broadly representative government that protects human rights and that is committed to peace and stability in the (Gulf) region," he said.

"I am quite sure that is what the vast majority of the Iraqi people want to see," he added.

Blair promised MPs that, apart from his Wednesday question periods, he would be making a major statement in the Commons on Iraq before it rises for a two-week Easter recess on April 14.

With a decisive battle for Baghdad imminent, Blair said British forces had performed "absolutely magnificently" in the war that began March 20.

"We can take immense pride in them," he said.

SARS scary, but not as bad as flu, data show

By Maggie Fox

WASHINGTON—It jumped from ducks to farmers in the densely populated southern provinces of China, spreading via jet to the whole world within a year and killing half a million people. SARS? No—just ordinary influenza.

As world health officials scramble to identify and contain the outbreak of Severe Acute Respiratory Syndrome, they are drawing constant parallels with flu, a much more familiar—and so far deadlier—foe.

SARS has killed an estimated 78 people and made 2,151 ill, the World Health Organization said in its latest update.

In contrast, influenza kills anywhere between 250,000 and 500,000 people every year around the world. In the United States, with a vaccine and modern medical care widely available, flu kills at least 36,000 people a year.

New strains regularly pop up, with varying degrees of lethality.

The "Spanish flu" pandemic of 1918 killed between 40 million and 50 million worldwide, most of them young, healthy adults. The "Asian flu" and "Hong Kong flu" pandemics of 1956-57 and 1967-68 killed a combined 4.5 million people.

The SARS outbreak is tiny in comparison, said Dr. Richard Duma, head of infectious diseases at the Halifax Medical Center in Daytona, Florida, and a member of the board of the National Foundation for Infectious Disease. "I think it is frightening a lot of people but I don't think it will produce the mortality that influenza will produce," Duma said.

In fact, when SARS cases were first reported in Guangdong early this year, experts assumed it was another outbreak of a deadly strain of influenza known as H5N1.

Bird flu

In 1997, Hong Kong authorities slaughtered more than a million chickens and ducks to stem the epidemic of "bird flu" that came to be known by its genetic nickname of H5N1. It killed six people and infected 18.

Richard Webby, an influenza virus expert at St. Jude Children's Research Hospital in Memphis, noted that three members of a Hong Kong family who visited Fujian Province in southern China became infected with H5N1 early this year and two of them died. They were the first known human cases since 1997.

US and WHO experts knew of a larger outbreak of respiratory disease in China's Guangdong province at the time and assumed it was more H5N1, which alarmed them.

The new outbreak has since been identified as SARS, which may be caused by a different virus, known as a coronavirus.

But the parallels with influenza are obvious. Both are respiratory diseases, both are highly infectious and both, apparently, have jumped from animals to people.

And both were born in China. Influenza begins as an infection of birds, one that does not make its avian hosts ill.

A slight mutation allows it to move into people, sometimes via pigs as an intermediate host.

Once a person recovers from influenza, he or she has immunity to that strain. But every year a new strain jumps from the flocks of chickens, ducks and geese raised in China, forcing vaccine makers to come up with a new formula.

Something similar may have happened with SARS, said Mike Osterholm, an infectious disease expert at the University of Minnesota who has for years been warning about such emerging infections.

"You have the world's largest population in China. You have the world's largest population of pigs in China, the world's largest population of aquatic birds. You have close contacts and you have a lot of different species where these agents are floating around, and you are going to see a jump from animals to people," Osterholm said in a telephone interview.

Only SARS looks worse than ordinary flu. It kills between 3.5 percent and 4 percent of known victims—a rate higher than the 1918 influenza epidemic, the worst epidemic in recorded history, in which 3 percent of patients died.

In an average year, influenza kills fewer than 1 percent of patients, experts said.

"Four percent mortality—that is a lot of people if you multiply it by a few million," Webby said.

AUCKLAND University of Technology researchers Dr. Steve O'Shea and Cat Boistad with the Colossal Squid at the Te Papa research laboratory in Wellington, April 2. The squid, which was caught in the Ross Sea last week, is thought to be the largest intact specimen to have been found. AP

Rare Colossal Squid caught

WELLINGTON, New Zealand—Fishermen in Antarctic waters have made an extremely rare catch—a Colossal Squid with eyes as big as dinner plates and razor-sharp hooks on its tentacles.

The 150-kg, 5-meter, immature female "Mesonychoteuthis hamiltoni" was caught recently on the surface of the Ross Sea, Auckland University of Technology research fellow Steve O'Shea said Thursday.

Only one other Colossal Squid specimen is known to have been caught before, although beaks of others have been found in the stomachs of sperm whales that prey on them.

In turn, the squid is a formidable hunter of large marine creatures such as Patagonian toothfish that can grow to be more two meters long.

"All we know is that it can move through the water to a depth of 2,000 meters and it is an extremely active and extremely aggressive killer," O'Shea told National Radio after examining the squid at a Wellington museum, he added.

It's much larger and differs from the more commonly caught giant squid by "having enormous hooks arming the tentacles and the arms. They rip you to bits. It can move these things in any direction it wants," he said.

It probably occurs as far north as the South Island of New Zealand and down to the Ross Sea in Antarctica.

The creature makes up three-quarters of the diet of large sperm whales, which suggested there are large numbers of them in Antarctic and sub-Antarctic waters, he added. AP

Resurgent Taliban

SPINBOLDAK, Afghanistan—Two dozen JS special forces troops and hundreds of their Afghan allies swooped in on a border village to drive out resurgent Taliban fighters in southern Afghanistan. Under fierce attack, the Taliban fled into nearby mountains where they were pummeled by US aircraft. Wednesday's fighting was the latest assault on rebel forces, who are regrouping after a US coalition drove them from power 18 months ago. At least eight Afghan soldiers and as many Taliban fighters were wounded. Six Taliban were captured and arrested, but another 60 were entrenched in the rugged Tor Ghar mountain range. AP

DR Congo peace pact

SUN CITY, South Africa—Democratic Republic of Congo (DRC) delegates signed a historic "final act" Wednesday to end more than four years of brutal warfare and set up a government of national unity. The signing in the luxury casino resort of Sun City in northwestern South Africa was witnessed by South African President Thabo Mbeki and the heads of state of Botswana, Namibia, Zambia and Zimbabwe. The agreements will see President Joseph Kabila remain as head of state during a transition period of two years, extendable to three, leading to the first democratic elections since those on independence from Belgium in 1960. Israel raids kill 6

GAZA CITY—Israel stepped up its operations early Thursday in Palestinian territories, killing six people in a helicopter and tank raid in the Gaza Strip and the West Bank, as the relative lull that accompanied the start of the war in Iraq further dissolves. The Israeli army expelled 1,000 Palestinian men of fighting age from their homes in a West Bank refugee camp and told them not to return until they had finished their hunt for militants. AP

Deadly Indonesia floods

JAKARTA—At least 45 people have been killed after torrential rainstorms caused floods and mudslides on the mountainous eastern Indonesian island of Flores, officials said Thursday. As of Thursday a total of 30 people had died in the central district of Ende, district chief Paulinus Domi said from Ende town. AP

China, Russia eye checks on US power

PARIS—Having failed to block war in Iraq, China and Russia are retooling strategies to attenuate US dominance and ensure that Washington cannot override their interests with impunity in the future, experts say.

Both states remain committed to closer relations with the United States, yet both were also deeply dismayed by Washington's handling of the crisis and are less inclined to pursue US ties at a high cost to other national interests.

For China, this may translate into a more muscular assertion of its role as the dominant Asia-Pacific power while Russia can be expected to reiterate its geostrategic value as a nuclear power straddling several ancient civilizations.

"China is above all keeping its eye on the consequences of Iraq for the Asia region," said Francois Godement, director of the Asia center at the Institut Francais des Relations Internationales (IFRI), a Paris think tank.

"China would like to consolidate relations with the United States, but is also very pragmatic and determined to defend what it regards as its own interests," Godement explained.

Thus was evident the day hostilities broke out in Iraq while predictably condemning the US-led war, Beijing also seized the occasion to fire off warnings to North Korea, Japan and Taiwan on how it expected them to behave.

A similar reaction occurred in Russia after an expected blast of vitriol directed at the United States, Moscow said it was delaying ratification of a nuclear disarmament treaty and soon thereafter test-fired a strategic missile.

Moscow said the timing of the missile test was unrelated to the Iraq crisis. But many see in these and other developments nascent and none-too-subtle policy recalibrations to remind Washington that other big players remain on the stage.

"For the United States, the Iraq crisis has been purely and simply about Iraq," said Steven Miller, director of the international security program at Harvard University's Kennedy School of Government in the United States.

"But for Russia, China and much of the world the crisis was at least as much about the United States, about what kind of role the United States would play in the world and whether the United States would play by the rules."

"Contending with American power as I think they believe, more important than dealing with Iraq," Miller said.

For China and Russia, as well as India, France, Germany and other powerful states, this contending with American power is producing new, "outside the box" foreign policy thinking that may influence the world for generations to come.

Writing Sunday in The New York Times, columnist Thomas Friedman posited for example that a transformed Nato, where Russia gradually supplants France, would emerge as the guarantor of a western-oriented "World of Order" in years ahead.

Experts say Moscow's hard line with Washington on Iraq is predicated by core interest in an orderly world, an interest that could be met by a Nato-like alliance provided Russia had a seat at any top table within it.

"The delay in ratification of the treaty was not so much to send a message to Washington as for internal reasons," said Viktor Baranovsky, deputy director of Russia's Institute of World Economy and International Relations (Imemo).

"Russia has an interest in a more orderly world. The current mechanisms for bringing this about are few and not very effective. If in the future Nato becomes that mechanism, that could be very good for Russia," Baranovsky said.

Though measurably more cautious in its official rhetoric, China is also on the lookout for new alliances or institutional mechanisms that would level the playing field more with the United States in managing global affairs. AP

Moro rebs fleeing Army torch 50 homes

By Edwin O. Fernandez
PDI Mindanao Bureau

COTABATO CITY—At least 50 houses were razed by suspected Moro Islamic Liberation rebels in Datu Piang, Maguindanao on Wednesday.

Maj. Gen. Generoso Senga, 6th Infantry Division chief, said the attackers also burned the houses of a provincial official and former Datu Piang Mayor Genuine Kamaong.

"This is how desperate the rebels are, they are losing in the battle, they are also losing mass support," Senga told the INQUIRER in a telephone interview.

"They are crazy," Sainudin Kasan, a variety store owner in Barangay Crossing Salbo, said of the attackers who earlier ordered them to leave their homes. The residents were told that they had to leave because of an impending attack by guerrillas.

"They just ordered us to leave, we don't know why they burned our houses when we have done nothing against them," he added. Kasan lost a store made of semi-concrete materials after gunmen poured kerosene and gasoline before setting it on fire.

Eid Kabatu, speaking for the MILF, admitted that the MILF committed the arson to divert the Army's attention away from the boundary of Datu Piang and Datu Shariff Aguak, both in Maguindanao, where guerrillas are under attack by government soldiers.

"We consider the fire victims as among the collateral damages in this war," Kabatu said, adding that the burning of the villagers' houses was triggered by Army attacks on MILF areas.

The houses were located beside the highway and about 50 meters away from the main headquarters of the 37th Infantry Battalion.

Senga said MILF guerrillas do not only target Army bases and checkpoints but are now also attacking civilians and non-combatants.

"The MILF is proclaiming they are fighting for the right of Bangsamoro people yet they are slowly killing them by burning the only wealth and (pieces of) property that these people have," Senga said in another radio interview.

The Army identified the leaders of the gang that torched the houses in Sitio Panang, Baran-gay Salbo as Commanders Uz-tadz Abdulwahid Malli and Francisco, both field officials of the MILF operating in the Talayan-Datu Piang areas.

The government and the MILF have expressed willingness to resume peace negotiations but clashes between them continue.

Malaysia has agreed to become a middle man for the talks, but continuing encounters between the Moro guerrillas and government troops are making the talks increasingly difficult.

Encounter kills after it's over

ANGAT, Bulacan—Three farmers were killed while two others, including an eight-year-old girl, were seriously hurt after a rifle grenade they were playing with exploded on Tuesday night in Barangay Pulong Yantok here.

Supt. Tomas de Armas, Angat police chief, said the rifle grenade was left in the village after the March 29 encounter between government troops and New People's Army rebels.

De Armas said one of the victims saw the unexploded rifle grenade and kept it.

He identified those killed as Joe Lamonera, 50; Victor dela Cruz, 52; and Mario Nicolas, 50. They died instantly due to the impact of the explosion and shrapnel wounds.

Flordeliza, Dela Cruz's wife, and their daughter the Bulacan Provincial Hospital in Malolos City.

De Armas said the victims found the rifle grenade in their farm and Dela Cruz decided to take it home. Later that day, the victims had a drinking spree at Dela Cruz's house and agreed to inspect and play with their find.

Nicolas held the rifle grenade and shook it but it suddenly exploded.

Flordeliza said her husband kept the rifle grenade as a "souvenir" from the bloody encounter in their village. She said her husband had no intention to play with the explosive but Nicolas was persistent.

De Armas advised residents in Barangay Pulong Yantok and its nearby villages not to play with explosives or firearms found in their villages. He asked the residents to report the find to the police. Carmela Reyes, PDI Central Luzon Desk

Dagupan to make new Guinness bid

DAGUPAN CITY—For the second time this May, this city will vie for the Guinness Book of Records' longest barbecue and street party, a record it aimed for, but failed to make, last year.

"We are better prepared this time for the attempt to break the Guinness Record, with a bigger budget and with more groups volunteering to make it a success," Mayor Benjamin Lim said.

Last year, the city failed to host what it said would be the biggest barbecue and street party during its annual Bangus Festival.

"We have learned our lessons from that first attempt and a lesson learned was not to cram many activities in one day," Lim said.

During last year's celebration, the street dancing called Gilangilang (Bangus harvest) was held at the AB Fernandez Street just hours before the barbecue party was to take place, giving workers little time to prepare the grills along the same road.

The same street was the site of several platforms where bands performed for the street party, and people who watched the shows blocked the grill area. Yolanda Fuentes, PDI Northern Luzon Bureau

Cop sued for escape of suspect in journalist's slay

PAGADIAN CITY—The wife of slain journalist Edgar Damalerio has filed charges against the former police chief of Zamboanga del Sur for the escape of the alleged gunman, a policeman under his protective custody.

Several residents on Monday reported seeing the alleged gunman, PO1 Guillermo Wapile, riding a motorcycle driven by an unidentified person armed with a handgun roaming the downtown area here despite the presence of policemen.

Damalerio's wife, Gemma, filed charges against Senior Supt. Pedrito Bactad Reyes, former police chief of Zamboanga del Sur, before the Office of the Deputy Ombudsman-military in Quezon City.

Mrs. Damalerio accused Reyes of grave misconduct, gross negligence and conduct prejudicial to the best interest of the service.

The case was filed following Wapile's escape on Jan. 27, two days before a local court issued a warrant for his arrest for the murder of Damalerio, a radio commentator of radio station dxKP and managing editor of the Zamboanga Scribe weekly newspaper.

At the time of his escape, Wapile was under the protective custody of Reyes.

A week after Wapile's escape, Police Director General Hermogenes Ebdane sacked Reyes from his post.

Mrs. Damalerio in her complaint sent to Deputy Ombudsman Orlando Casimiro accused Reyes of allowing Wapile to escape from his custody.

Reyes is reportedly due to retire this year. But if found guilty, he would not be able to receive benefits and pension.

Reyes had denied allegations that he allowed Wapile to escape. But he failed to explain how the suspect escaped. Hernan R. dela Cruz, PDI Mindanao Bureau

Passengers with SARS symptoms monitored

By Jolene R. Bulambot
PDI Visayas Bureau

CEBU CITY—Officials of the Bureau of Quarantine and International Health Surveillance here are closely monitoring close to 20 passengers who manifested symptoms of the Severe Acute Respiratory Syndrome (SARS) when they arrived in Cebu two weeks ago from Hong Kong, Singapore and Taipei.

Dr. Manuel Bahandi, head of the quarantine division at the Mactan Cebu International Airport (MCIA), declined to give the identities of the passengers but gave assurances that he was in close contact with them.

He told the INQUIRER that they were still monitoring the conditions of these passengers to determine if they still experience the same symptoms since their arrival.

Bahandi, however, said there was no cause for alarm because none of the passengers was in serious condition.

Healthy

Nida Puentespaña, head nurse of the quarantine division, Wednesday told the INQUIRER that based on their monitoring, the passengers were all healthy.

Puentespaña said she called the passengers who told her that they were fine.

"They are all okay now. They just had those symptoms for the past three weeks and based on our monitoring, they have been fine," she said.

The Department of Health urged the public not to panic because there had been no confirmed SARS case in the Philippines.

Health Secretary Manuel Dayrit issued an advisory following the high demand for masks in the wake of unconfirmed reports that SARS was already in the country.

"We have no confirmed case yet so there is no need for the public to panic and secure masks for themselves," Dayrit said in a news release.

Bahandi said 10 to 20 passengers manifested SARS-like symptoms upon arrival from Hong Kong, Singapore and Taipei. SARS cases have been reported in Hong Kong and Singapore.

Based on the health checklist given to passengers during boarding, Bahandi said the passengers had fever, cough, sore throats and body weakness for three weeks before the flight.

SARS is characterized mainly by fever and cough. After five to seven days, the infected person develops SARS.

Bahandi said the passengers were told to subject themselves to quarantine at home for 10 days to determine if they were infected of the mysterious disease.

Quarantine

"We have at least 10-20 passengers who have been manifesting such symptoms based on the checklist. We advised them to confine themselves in their respective houses and contact us if they continue to have those symptoms," he said.

He said these symptoms may also be related to flight conditions experienced by passengers and not necessarily with SARS.

So far, Bahandi said they have not received any feedback from the monitoring team on the condition of these passengers.

"We are continually monitoring them since we have their telephone numbers and addresses but until now they have not even called us," he added.

Bahandi said all passengers coming from countries affected with SARS have been required to fill up health checklists or the so-called yellow forms during boarding at their point of origins.

SARS alert is up at all airports in the country, starting with the Ninoy Aquino International Airport, the country's main gateway, where airport chief Edgardo Manda (right) supervises the setting up of quarantine checkpoints for possible carriers of the deadly disease.

4 children die in Cebu City fire

By Jhunnex Napailacan
PDI Visayas Bureau

CEBU CITY—Four children were killed on Tuesday afternoon when fire ate up their house in Sitio Calot, Barangay San Antonio, Boljoon town, some 103 kilometers south of Cebu City.

Police identified the fatalities as Jessa Inigo, 5; and her siblings Peggy, 3; Alexa, 2; and Freddie, 1 and half years old.

Police said only the body of Freddie was not burned beyond recognition because his elder siblings embraced him.

SPO3 Cristino Ura-ca, investigator of the Boljoon police station, said the children were alone inside the house when the fire broke out at about 2:45 p.m.

The father, Guillermo, 34 and a carpenter, was working in a neighboring village while their mother, Lolita, 23, was fetching water from a distant well.

Ura-ca said the parents believed that their children were playing with a lighter.

By the time Lolita arrived, Ura-ca said, the house was already razed to the ground.

Millions suffer asthma

Asthma is primarily an air-borne disease that can be triggered by pesticides, pollutants, chemicals and fumes, the health experts say. Emotional stress and an allergy can also trigger an attack. The statistics are high—Millions.

EPA studies show air pollutants

EPA studies of human exposure to air pollutants show that indoor levels of many pollutants are higher than outdoor levels. These levels are of particular concern because it is estimated that people spend approximately 90 percent of their time indoors. In recent years, comparative risk studies and its Science Advisory Board have found that indoor air pollution among the top five contributors to human health. EPA, in close cooperation with the private sector, has begun a concerted effort to understand indoor air pollution and to reduce its health impacts. EPA's Indoor Air Division has long been recognized as a leader in this effort.

In recent years, there has been concern that indoor air pollution may be a risk factor for some of the health effects of air pollution. EPA's Indoor Air Division is currently conducting a study to assess the health impacts of indoor air pollution. The study will focus on the health impacts of indoor air pollution on children and the elderly.

Pinay with killer pneumonia take to I

Filipino domes helper who was infected with the highly contagious Severe Acute Respiratory System (SARS) moved yesterday to the intensive care unit of the Prince of Wales Hospital after her condition deteriorated, according to sources at the Philippine Consulate General.

Mylene Luzon, 24, was admitted to the hospital in Sha Tin district in the New Territories on March 14 after showing symptoms of SARS. She has been confined since then, and the doctor said that patient was not responding to the treatment administered.

Long-term exposure to air pollutants may cause cancer and long-term neurological, reproductive and other health effects.

A3 Long term exposure to air pollution cause death

All kinds of activities contribute to the air we breathe. In addition to causes of pollution, day-to-day activities such as driving, filling your car, cleaning, and using household gases and particles to the concentrations, these pollutants are also sensitive to the environment and us. The average adult breathes about 15 cubic feet of air per pound of body weight every day. Children are also more sensitive to air pollutants. People exposed to high concentrations of air pollutants may experience an irritated throat, eyes, an irritated throat, and long-term exposure to air pollutants may cause cancer and long-term neurological, reproductive and other health effects.

were careful to say they did not know if the attacks had anything to do with the wharf explosion, which occurred at about 7:10 p.m. on Wednesday.

"We must not be intimidated," the President said Wednesday. "The police and the military alone cannot do the job. This is a total war requiring the full attention and resources of the entire community. Each citizen must be the eyes and ears to sense danger and initiative to immediately report to authorities."

Yesterday, Ms. Macapagal said prayers at the blast site, which was covered with flowers and candles. She also talked to the injured at Davao Medical Center and gave them money as part of government assistance.

In a radio interview, National Security Adviser Raulo Golez said the President's declaration would allow the military to assist the police in tracking down the suspected bombers.

Golez said the military can help the police conduct "a crackdown with checkpoints and visibility patrols," but stressed, "we are not going to violate the rights of the public."

Justice Secretary Simeon Datumanong justified the President's declaration, explaining that it was part of the executive function of the President.

"She can call the AFP to suppress violence, to prevent the recurrence of what had happened," he said.

"No rights are suspended under a state of lawlessness. Under this, the AFP is called upon to suppress lawless violence to protect persons and properties," he stressed.

Armed Forces Vice Chief of Staff Lt. Gen. Rodolfo Garcia said the military was just waiting for instructions. "Our legal people will just have to define the limits of the powers that would now be vested on the authorities under the state of lawless violence as declared by the President," Garcia said.

Four attacks

Davao City Sasa Wharf Bombing

1:30 a.m. yesterday, when gunmen fired on a mosque in the Ecoland area.

Minutes later, five men onboard a maroon Isuzu Fuego pickup sprayed a mosque in Ilang, Tibungco district, with gunfire. Two men riding in the back of the pickup hurled two hand grenades, damaging the mosque.

Witnesses said the suspects immediately sped off to the downtown area where police and military forces set up checkpoints following the wharf bombing.

Police recovered several empty shells from M-16 Armalite and M-14 assault rifles from the scene.

Minutes later, a grenade was lobbed into the entrance of a mosque in Mini-Forest, Quezon Boulevard.

Manding said the people inside, numbering more than 10, were lucky the grenade did not reach the mosque itself.

In the same hour, unidentified men launched a rocket-propelled grenade that landed on a farm near a mosque in Barangay Sirawan in Toril district.

City Councilor Antilbansa Manding urged his fellow Muslims to stay calm and not take the law into their own hands. He also asked the government not to condition the public's mind into believing that Muslims were behind the wharf bombing. "That is unfair since not all Muslims are bad. We are even saddened by the incident," he said.

A witness said the Sasa wharf bomber had carried the bomb in a package placed in a yellow plastic bag.

Duterte said the witness told investigators the man left the package in the crowd of well-wishers, then pretended to buy barbecue at a nearby stall.

The man, a cartographic sketch of whom was shown to reporters yesterday, reportedly left moments before the explosion.

"There were a lot of people who saw the guy coming in," Duterte said.

The suspected bomber was judged to be about 36 years old, 5'4" to 5'7" in height, of medium built with a white complexion.

But Chief Supt. Isidro Lapena, police chief for Southern Mindanao, said investigators had not ascertained if the suspect left the scene before the bomb went off.

Lapena said they do not discount the possibility the suspect may have been among those killed or injured.

"We have to double-check the hospitals and morgues where the dead and the wounded were brought. We will also get information from victims, this is standard operating procedure," he said.

Initial investigation by the police identified the bomb to be potassium nitrate packed in a "jetmatic pack."

"We also recovered metal parts but this will still be subjected to metallurgical examination," Lapena said.

MILF hand?

Asked if the Moro Islamic Liberation Front could have been behind the bombing, Lapena said: "We are not ruling out anybody."

The MILF immediately denied involvement in the seaport blast.

Lapena said they have invited people for questioning but refused to identify them.

"They can shed light on the investigation," he said.

But the mayor said investigators were exploring all theories. He could not give specific answers on the type of bomb pending results of the forensic examination.

"All we have now (are) government probabilities. The forensic group is at it. We don't have the results, it's being worked on by the police crime laboratory. We expect to have a copy of that exam by this afternoon," Duterte said.

But from the looks of it, Duterte said, it could be the same type of explosive used in the March 4 Davao International Airport bombing that killed 22 people and injured 133 others.

The city government issued a statement, hours after the bombing, asking residents, "as an added precautionary measure" to "refrain from bringing and/or carrying backpacks unless you are traveling."

"Under a state of lawless violence, I can empower the military to do these crackdowns," the President said on Wednesday.

Sen. Aquilino Pimentel Jr., a lawyer who hails from Mindanao, said Ms. Macapagal's declaration was "not anywhere near martial law" but he expressed reservations about potential civil rights abuses.

"This can be misinterpreted by the law enforcers as a go signal for a crackdown on the population," he told Reuters.

"I am a little apprehensive that they might harass people and probably do their racial and ethnic profiling, which could worsen the situation in Mindanao," Anthony S. Allada, Joel B. Escobilla, Joselle R. Badilla, Ayan C. Mellejor, Charlie C. Senase, Edwin O. Fernandez and Rosa-May V. de Guzman, PDI Mindanao Bureau; AFP, AP, Reuters; Michael Lim Ubac, Martin Marfil UNRELIEVED grief: A relative of blast victim cries her heart out.

Sister Dulce's close friends remember her as having started the fad of saying "I love you one, I love you two, I love you three," which she learned from a 6-year-old boy named Anton who turned up in her life and whose background she did not know.

Sister Dulce wrote verses titled "Anton," part of which said: "Discovering Anton then, is also discovering myself in the world full of hatred and pain/Love will always give joy/For Anton, I love you two, equals I love you one,/And for best friends, I love you two equals I love you all!"

At the time of her death, Sister Dulce, 40, was the social action coordinator of the Zamboanga archdiocese. (The social action center serves the needs of the poor and promotes justice and peace in a given diocese.)

Sister Dulce was also with the Franciscan Movement for Justice, Peace and Integrity of Creation and at the same time a mediator of the Stichting Lilane Fonds of Holland which serves the disabled poor. Before she moved to Zamboanga, Sister Dulce, who was born in Santiago, Isabela, worked among the disabled in Butuan City. She was also with Kaalagad, a national ecumenical reflection-action group composed of church workers. She had also worked in Aklan and Zamboanga as a pastoral worker.

St. Josephine Ambatall, SFIC head in the Philippines, said Sister Dulce, two other nuns of her congregation and a lay associate left Zamboanga for Davao City to join other nuns in a spiritual retreat in Catalunan Grande. They traveled aboard the ferry that docked at the Sasa wharf.

When the bomb exploded, the nuns from Zamboanga and the Davao nuns who met them had just boarded their vehicle outside the gate.

"After the blast, the nuns rushed out of the vehicle and realized Sister Dulce was not with them," Sister Josephine said. "They went back for her right away and found her bleeding and dying. Sister Dulce was badly hit in the face."

St. Aurora Gonzales drove her to Davao Medical Center but it was too late.

Another nun also sustained wounds.

Fr. Meliton Oso, director of Jaro, Iloilo social action center, said he condemned the bombing in the strongest possible terms.

"Should I say condemn or denounce? What is the strongest and the right word?" he said over a telephone, his voice choking.

Fr. Sauro David, social action director of the diocese of Kalibo, Aklan, said the death of De Guzman was a big loss to the Catholic Church.

"We lost one advocate of peace and sustainable development," he said.

David said De Guzman was assigned in the parish of Libacao town, Aklan province, some years ago.

"She died a martyr for what she had been fighting for—justice and against violence," said St. Rorie Gonzalez, vocation director of Cebu City.

Sister Dulce's remains will be brought to Manila today and will lie in state at St. Joseph's College chapel in Quezon City.

Sister Dulce had recently organized a campaign against the Purchased Power Adjustment, and spearheaded movements against war and violence.

"And she (became) a victim herself. She was a sacrificial lamb for the justice and peace," Sister Rorie said. With reports from Julie S. Alipala and Ayan C. Mellejor, PDI Mindanao Bureau; and Ma. Diosa Labiste, PDI Visayas Bureau.

'Ma, bring me to the hospital'; 'Son, there's no car'

She said her boy was extraordinarily sweet.

"He was the one preparing my bed. He also found ways to relieve his father's stress from working as a garbage collector," Felomina said.

Bonnel was also so thrifty that out of his daily allowance of P30, he was able to save P100 at the end of school days.

He was saving so he could have his two front teeth repaired.

Like typical teenagers, Bonnel was slowly becoming conscious of his looks because "a lot of girls had started taking interest in him," his mother said.

Family trip

After disembarking from Superferry 15, Christopher Morales was excited. He had brought his family to attend his wife's brother's funeral, but he was also looking forward to a reunion with his wife's relatives.

His wife Mariou had given birth to a baby boy 12 days ago and it would be the first time relatives would see the baby.

For this reason, Morales, of Peidira 2, Ninoy Aquino Road in Pasay City, agreed to come to Davao with his wife Mariou Asis to console with his in-laws.

A few days ago, Mariou's brother

Richard had died after a knife-wielding man attacked him.

After exchanging pleasantries with Rodito, another brother of Mariou's, the Moraleses haggled their way out of the Sasa Port to the waiting service vehicle that would bring them to Richard's wake.

As they were approaching the gate, the powerful bomb exploded.

Rodito and his nephew John Ray, 12, died instantly. Christopher died in the hospital.

Mariou, 36, and her sons John Mark, the 12-day old infant, John Christian, 2, Christopher Jr., 14, and Charlie, 18, were also critically wounded and were rushed to the hospital.

Richard was buried yesterday afternoon. But now there are three more coffins to pray over: those of John Ray, Rodito and Christopher. Dennis Jay C. Santos and Anthony S. Allada, PDI Mindanao Bureau

Tigers establish record

DETROIT—The Detroit Tigers became the first team to have four pitchers make their major league debuts in the same game Wednesday, according to the Elias Sports Bureau, baseball's statistician. Venezuela's Wilfredo Ladozma, Jeremy Bonderman, Chris Spurling and Matt Roney all appeared in their first big league game for the Tigers, who lost 8-1 to the Minnesota Twins.

MENES

GAMES TODAY (PhilSports Arena)
5 p.m., FedEx vs. Alaska
7:30 p.m., Red Bull vs. San Miguel Beer

By June Navarro

SO FAR, Vergel Meneses seems to be the barometer of how Federal Express performs in the Samsung-PBA All-Filipino Cup.

When the "Aerial Voyager" dishes off an explosive performance, the Express come out winning. If he doesn't, their opponents steal the game away.

The playing condition of Meneses will again be a decisive factor for the Express when they face the Alaska Aces today at the PhilSports Arena.

Statistics of the high-flying Meneses in the past seven games will confirm this.

The four-game streak of the Express (4-3) saw the 6-foot-3 Meneses scoring an average of 21 points a game while posting only a total of 15 points on all of FedEx's setbacks.

During the Express defeat against Baran-gay Ginebra that snapped their winning run over the weekend, Meneses was held to eight points on a 2-for-14 shooting and three turnovers in 29 minutes of action.

But mind you, the Aces have an axe to grind against the Express on their 5 p.m. meeting. The Express were responsible for breaking the Aces' 4-0 record with a stunning 90-86 victory almost a month ago.

The Aces, who lost another two games after that Express debacle, assumed the lead in Group A with a 5-3 slate after beating defending champion Coca-Cola, 86-77.

Mike Cortez, the only rookie leading his team in scoring with 14.8 points per game, is itching to get back at the Express along with Aces' starters Don Allado, Ali Peek, John Arigo and Rob Durr.

In the other game at 7:30 p.m., Batang Red Bull tries to extend its win streak to six games as they clash against San Miguel Beer, whose own four-game run got halted by an 88-85 defeat opposite sister squad Purefoods.

Interestingly, the only setback of the Thunder (6-1) came at the hands of the Beermen, a 93-90 squeaker done at the same venue on March 5. The Beermen are tied with the Express at Group A while the Thunder are way ahead in Group B.

At that time, San Miguel's Dorian Pena was serving the second of a two-game suspension for marijuana use, leaving Nic Belasco to defend the frontline of the Beermen all by his lonesome.

Pena's presence in the shaded area will now make Red Bull's Davonn Harp, Mick Penisi, Homer Se and rookie Enrico Villanueva work harder, harder than the Thunder's past five games.

Stronger PBA-fan affinity urged

By June Navarro

AS THE Philippine Basketball Association celebrates its 29th anniversary on April 9, Commissioner Noli Eala vowed to strengthen the league's ties with its fans in an effort to remain as the nation's favorite sporting spectacle.

"With the PBA getting a lot of support from private companies and the players commanding a big following, it's just a matter of bringing the product closer to the people," said Eala.

With Eala at the helm of the first play-for-pay league in Asia, the PBA has launched drastic efforts to reinvent itself and be attuned to the changing times.

League rules have also been altered for the PBA to keep in step with the innovations of the sport in the international cage scene.

"I think the PBA is a living entity in such a way that it continues to grow. And as it grows, change will be a vital part of that survival," said Eala.

From its early years, when teams numbered six to eight, the PBA has a fixed membership of 10 ballclubs, all aiming to be the best.

Draftings, salary-cap rules, free-agent rules and the like have slowly dismantled dynasties and made parity a by-word in the league.

Hurting Hotdogs pull thru

By June Navarro

ALVIN Patrimonio had a pulled groin, Chris Cantorjos hurt his left calf muscle and Rey Evangelista limped off the court, his right foot inflamed and heavier than the other.

Yet, it didn't stop the Purefoods T.J. Hotdogs from scoring their first back-to-back victories of the season at the expense of the Talk N Text Phone Pals on Wednesday night.

"Although we were hurting, the players rose to the challenge and followed the game plan to the letter," said the youthful Gregorio after the Hotdogs edged the Phone Pals, 85-83, to pick up their third win in eight games.

Kerby Raymundo dribbled an 18-footer with less than five seconds to go before coming up with a monster block on a potential game-clinching triple by Talk N Text's Noli Locsin as the Hotdogs preserved the win.

Gregorio said the game plan was to stop Asi Taulava at all cost.

Though Taulava managed to escape with 22 points, Gregorio said the Hotdogs did a fine job frustrating and limiting the offensive options of the 6-foot-9 Filipino-Tongan.

"Our defense was centered on Asi. It clicked because Taulava failed to get the ball from the spots that he wanted," added Gregorio. "As a result, the offense of Talk N Text suddenly collapsed."

As Patrimonio, Cantorjos and Evangelista, whose foot will undergo an MRI to determine the cause of the pain, watched at the sidelines, Rodney Santos and Gilbert Demape gladly took over and delivered for the Hotdogs.

"We got our confidence back and it will inspire us to win a third straight when we meet Barangay Ginebra over the weekend," said Gregorio.

This time, Gregorio said, the Hotdogs will map out a battle plan to stop Eric Menk, the Kings' most lethal arsenal at the frontline.

Kiwi qualifier ousts top-seeded Korean

By Roy Luarca

LEG cramps and the hot weather proved too much to bear for top seed Chris Kwon yesterday as he bowed to qualifier William Ward of New Zealand in the third round of the 14th Mitsubishi Lancer International Junior Tennis Championships.

Kwon, a Korean-American ranked No. 4 in the world, felt throbbing pain on his legs near the end of the second set. He played on but the scorching heat at the Rizal Memorial Tennis Center compounded his misery as he vomited in the third set before retiring 5-7, 6-3, 4-2.

"It's very hot today," said Kwon, who fired four of his six aces in the first set. "I also didn't get enough rest and had little time to practice."

Ahead, 3-0, in the second set, Kwon suddenly felt his legs stiffen, finding it difficult to catch Ward's placement shots.

The 17-year-old Ward, ranked No. 258 in the ITF Juniors, pounced on the opportunity, attacking the net relentlessly to put the pressure on Kwon.

"Kwon played solid tennis in the first set so I attacked more and hit the ball harder in the second set," said Ward, a former member of the World Youth Cup team. "He couldn't keep up with me so I just run him around in the third set."

The Auckland-based Ward, owner of two doubles titles back home, is slated to meet No. 10 Karan Rastogi of India, who ousted No. 8 Eric Scherer of Germany, 7-6 (4), 6-4, in the quarterfinals.

Ward said he hasn't seen Rastogi play, but is confident of winning because he's in better condition than last week, when food poisoning forced him to default his second round match in the Amata Cup in Pattaya, Thailand.

Upsets abound as Jacob Melkens of Denmark and unseeded Tom Rushby of Germany also advanced.

The 14th-ranked Melkens subdued third seed and world No. 25 American Scott Oudsema, 6-4, 7-6 (4), to forge a duel against No. 6 Australian Adam Peeney, a 6-3, 7-5 victor over No. 9 Briton Jack Baker.

Rushby shocked fifth seed Somdev Dev Varman of India, 4-6, 6-2, 6-2, to advance against second seed and world No. 17 Taiwanese Lu Tsu-Wei, who damped Korean Kim Sun-Yong, 6-2, 6-1.

Korean Hyun-Joon Suk, the fourth seed, and No. 7 Briton Jamie Baker will part ways in the quarterfinals. Suk bested No. 15 Jimmy Schneider of the Netherlands, 7-5, 6-4, while Baker stopped No. 12 Tore Deleuran-Skjold of Denmark, 4-6, 6-4, 3-0 (ret.).

RP Cuppers seek revenge

By Roy Luarca

TWICE, the Filipinos have bowed to the Kazakhs in Davis Cup action. Will they let themselves be shamed again in their home turf?

Part of the answer will be known when the Philippines and Kazakhstan begin their relegation tie today, with both countries trying to stay in Group II of the Asia-Oceania Zone Davis Cup competition at the Philippine Columbian Association indoor shell-clay courts.

The Filipinos are hoping that the hot weather, their homecourt advantage and the partisan crowd would help them in their bid to exact revenge over the Kazakhs, who beat them, 4-1, in the first round of Zone II competitions last year in Kazakhstan and 2-0, in the final of their 2001 Group II match-up at the Rizal Memorial Tennis Center.

Top-ranked Filipino Joseph Victorino and No. 2 Joseph Arcilla battle the Kazakhs at 1 p.m., with the 19-year-old Victorino facing Kazakhstan's No. 2 Anton Tsybmalov in the opener and Arcilla tackling world No. 810 Alexey Kedrnouk in the second singles match of the best-of-five matches.

The pivotal doubles tiff, pitting Arcilla and Michael Mora III against Kedrnouk and Tsybmalov is set at 1 p.m. tomorrow after which the tie ends with the reverse singles on Sunday.

The Kazakhs claimed they are not bothered by the hot weather and said the draw, held yesterday at the Midtown Hotel with Congressman Monico Puenavella and neutral referee David Smith from New Zealand in attendance, favored their three-man team.

"It was a good draw for both teams. We are ready for this tie and no team got the edge after the draw," said Kazakhstan playing captain Iwan Tsybmalov.

Filipino non-playing captain Johnny Jose believes that his wards are better prepared this time and are more determined to stop the Kazakhs' domination.

If they fail to do so, the Filipinos would be relegated once more to Group III, where they languished in 2001.

The Filipinos dropped into the relegation tie after absorbing a 5-0 licking from the Chinese in the first round, where the Kazakhs also bowed to the Taiwanese, 4-1.

Ormoc upset

ORMOC—Harold Trinidad of Maasin snuffed highly fancied Jeedree Tan 6-1, 6-2 to gain a semifinal seat in the boys' 16-under division in the 2003 Milo Junior Tennis Cup and Regional Workshop here at the Ormoc-Midtown Tennis Club.

Trinidad thus set up a semis encounter with Cebu's Julian Lagman, a 7-6, 6-2 winner past brother Julius Lagman; while Christopher Canezo ousted Josellito Lapid 6-3, 6-3 to meet Lawrence Borres, who downed Jaggy Simbante 6-2, 6-3 in the Milo netfest organized by CTW and supported by Wilson balls, Adidas and Sports Kids with a Group 3 sanction from the Phil.ta.

By Dennis U. Eroa

SO DEVASTATING was John O that coach Dong Vergeire enjoyed the luxury of fielding all his 15 players.

Yesterday, Vergeire's charges bounced back after getting spanked by ICTSI-Archers last Sunday with a 103-84 victory over Nutri-licious in the Sunkist-PBL Unity Cup at the Pasig Sports Center.

Samigue Eman, John O's 6-foot-9 recruit, finally saw action to the thunderous applause of the sizeable crowd. The Davaoño giant went scoreless, attempting just once from the field in seven minutes of action but his performance hardly mattered.

Former UST gunner Emerson Oreta, Mark Macapagal, Ricky Calimag and Ranidel de Ocampo all finished in double figures as John O never looked back from a 53-41 halftime lead.

"We really wanted to win this one. Everybody clicked," said John O's youthful manager Carlos Sarlo. John O bowed to ICTSI-Archers, 71-62, at the San Juan Gym.

Scores:

JOHN O 103—Oreta 20, Calimag 16, De Ocampo 15, Macapagal 14, Cruz 10, Melando 6, Madrid 5, Oriaga 4, Vergara 4, Kiram 3, McCoy 2, Laygo 2, Manor 0, Villamin 0, Eman 0.

Smell

SPECTATOR

PAINTERS have eyes, musicians ears and athletes "smell." If cooks have taste distinctly different from us, that's a given. One can't be a cook if his taste buds are as flawed as a Al S. Mendoza smoker's.

Boxers know immediately if they smell either defeat or victory. Golfers, too. Ali knew if he'd win or not. Tiger knows if a tournament is his or not.

It's not so in basketball. In this game, one player cannot do it alone. Meaning, he cannot win it by his lonesome, lose it by his lonesome. Team sport demands that virtually the majority of those involved in a game will either will to lose it or win it.

Let's take the NBA as a case in point.

Michael Jordan has been dying to win it for his Washington Wizards. To a certain extent, the world's greatest cager has been successful. But then, sadly, his efforts seem to fall short of his goal, pushing Washington to the B-team playoffs. And that's because despite his still intact skills at age 40, his teammates are simply no match against the opposition. Not because they lack the desire to win but mainly because their skills are not as great as Jordan's. In his Chicago days, Jordan had Dennis Rodman and Scottie Pippen as his main back-up. Rodman and Pippen are now among the NBA's all-time best. Can you cite just one Wizard who can give Jordan the support the way Rodman and Pippen did to His Airness in the '90s? I bet you there's none.

It's different in golf.

In golf, there's only the golfer against the rest of the field. He makes a major mistake, or a series of mistakes as in Tiger Woods making multiple trips to the pond in the recent PGA event, that's it. The tournament is lost. He makes good shots 99.99 percent of the way, he's sure of victory. Almost.

It's the same process in boxing, or any other individual sport for that matter.

A boxer is up against a lone opponent and, compared to golf, it can be said that that's an easier job than a golfer's. A golfer has the entire field to contend with, the boxer has only his fellow boxer to deal with in trying to win or lose his fight. It is in this light that it's really harder for a golfer than a boxer to smell either victory or defeat. The golfer has the vaguest idea of how his other opponents scattered in various flights are performing. The boxer has only the person in front of him separating him from victory or defeat.

Like the painter or the musician, or even the cook, the athlete has to have it (the element of smell, remember?) or he/she is better off planting camote in the island of Pangasinan.

Lunas to defend crown vs Gorres

THE GAMES and Amusements Board yesterday mandated Rolly Lunas to defend his Philippine flyweight crown against Z Gorres on June 1.

If any consolation to Lunas, GAB chair Eduardo Villanueva raised his purse to at least P108,000 if the promotion coinciding with Makati Day celebrations pushes through at the Makati Coliseum.

Lunas was supposed to figure in a non-title bout on April 27 in Nagoya where he was supposed to receive $2,000 (P108,000).

Lawyer Rudy Salud, one of Gorres' handlers, urged the GAB to strip Lunas of his crown if he chooses to fight in Japan instead.

May 16-18

THE 2003 National Wushu Championships set from May 16-18 at the Ninoy Aquino Stadium will be a basis for the selection of members of the national wushu team competing in the 22nd Southeast Asian Games in Vietnam this December.

Wushu Federation of the Philippines (WFP) honorary chair Francis Chan said that the selection of national team members shall be based on the performance of participants in the national championships.

By Roy Luarda

A FIESTA-LIKE atmosphere will pervade during the opening of the 2nd Manila Youth Games on Sunday at the Rizal Memorial Track and Field Stadium.

Dances, songs, bands, athletic groups and other festive activities will spice up the ceremonies involving the city's 897 barangays, six congressional districts and more than 30 public and private schools.

Philippine Sports Commission Chair Eric Buain will be the guest of honor in the ceremonies to be attended by City Hall luminaries led by Mayor Lito Atienza. The week-long event will be participated in by about 8,000 entries who are 15 years old and younger.

Buhain praised the organizing Manila Sports Council (Masco) chaired by Arnold "Ali" Atienza for contributing to the national grassroots sports development.

"I doff my hat to the city of Manila for putting emphasis on the role of sports and the youth in nation building. The MY Games is one program that the PSC appreciates very much because it lives with our own programs," said Buhaon.

The PSC has provided assistance to the city of Manila, including the use of various facilities at the Rizal Memorial Sports Complex for the event. Other supporters are Pagcor, WG&A Super ferry, Globe Telecoms, Coca Cola, Power Aid/Viva Mineral Water, Pressworks, Victor Sports and the Philippine Navy.

Mayor Atienza said sports is an important vehicle in the molding of young minds, particularly in the effort to steer them away from society's menaces.

"That's why our City Hall is putting emphasis on sports development to guide our youth toward becoming assets of society," said Arizenza, who will declare the Games open.

Coinciding with the opening rites, the PSC and Masco will launch the PSC-Manila Talent Identification Program, which will spearhead the nationwide talent ID to be implemented by the PSC.

Carlos first to break par in Jr Interclub

By Jong Arcano

RANGED against the big kids and even the roly-poly, Jobim Carlos showed what a tiny kid with a good swing can do when he submitted the first sub-par round in the Philippine Airlines Junior Interclub golf championships at the Camp Aguinaldo Golf Club course.

The 10-year-old Carlos got his bid to match last season's unbeaten summer run with a solid one-under-par 67 on three birdies and two bogeys to grab the boys Class D (9-10 years) leadership and lead Agunaldo "A" to the top in the team competition.

The Holy Infant Academy grade-schooler knocked in birdies on the seventh, 14th and 17th against bogeys on the sixth and 12th in the 54-hole tourney kicking off the Junggol Summer Circuit which drew more than 200 entries in two venues including the Class A and Class B battles at Manila Golf.

Helen Juan Superal, one of three siblings campaigning in the circuit, stayed close on the heels of Carlos with an even 68.

Carlos' big round enabled Aguinaldo "A" to post a four-stroke lead over the Vilamor squad led by Saperal with a 225 total. Kagtingan was running third at 241 and Aguinaldo "B" fourth at 340.

Over at Manila Golf, Manila Southwoods held a precarious one-shot margin over Rivera and a four-point spread over Aguinaldo after Round 1.

Andrea Legaspi, meanwhile, was up by one over reigning world champion Dottie Ardina in girls Class D after a 77. Jik Jik Abdon and Mia Piccio paced Class C (11-12) and JP de Claro and Princess Supera showed the way in Class E (8-under).

Abdon scored a 74 to go one up on Benjamin Clark Ekegren, Piccio moved four ahead of Debbie de Villa with her 79 Princess Supera, exploited the absence of the big guns in her class to lead Marvie Monsu.ve by 12 following an 88 while de Claro was neck-and-neck with the fancied JR Gonzales, 78-80.

The other sponsors of the summer circuit are Bellevue Manila, Exito Mfg. Corp., Global Lighting, Third World Eximport, HBW Ent., MCCI Corp., BF Technology, Samsung and Air Liquide Phils.

Blazers make it as Rockets lose

MILWAUKEE—Sam Cassell scored 20 points as Milwaukee erased a 13-point deficit to beat Houston 106-99 in the NBA Wednesday night.

The victory moved Milwaukee (37-39) two games ahead of Washington in the race for the Eastern Conference eighth playoff spot. The Wizards lost to Sacramento.

Houston's loss meant Portland clinched a Western Conference playoff berth. Houston (38-37) has lost four of its past five games and is 1 1/2 games behind Phoenix for the West's eighth playoff spot.

Gary Payton and Toni Kukoc each scored 18 points for Milwaukee, which scored 20 points on 22 Houston turnovers.

Chinese rookie Yao Ming had 15 points and six rebounds in 33 minutes for Houston.

Spurs 105, Grizzlies 87

In Memphis, Tennessee, Tim Duncan scored 33 points and grabbed 19 rebounds to lead San Antonio's inside dominance of Memphis.

Duncan connected on 13 of 16 shots from the field as the Spurs won their seventh straight game. Memphis, meanwhile, is in a tail-spin, losing seven of its last eight.

Lorenzen Wright led Memphis with 24 points.

Hornets 106, Nets 97

In New Orleans, Jamal Mashburn scored 24 points, Baron Davis and George Lynch each added 19 as the Hornets beat New Jersey to clinch their fourth straight playoff spot.

ALLEN Iverson (center) drives between Chicago Bulls' Lennox Barter (35) and Donyell Marshall (42) in the first half Wednesday. The Sixers won, 108-101.

'A-Rod' sparkles

ANAHEIM, California—Alex Rodriguez became the youngest player to hit 300 homers, but the Anaheim Angels beat the Rangers 11-5 Wednesday behind home runs from Troy Glaus, Brad Fullmer and Darin Erstad. Rodriguez, 27 years, 249 days old, hit a three-run homer in the fifth inning off Ramon Ortiz (1-0), his second of the season. The fastest to 300 had been Hall of Famer Jimmie Foxx at 27 years, 328 days. Foxx finished his career with 534 homers. AP

Cervantes, pals prevail

THE QUARTET of Pete Cervantes, Isa Velayo, Buddy Velayo and Gilbert Martinez outplayed 70 other teams, out of a record-breaking 282 participants, to top Group 1 of the March monthly tournament at the Legends and Masters courses of Manila Southwoods Golf and Country Club.

Using the Scramble as format of play, Cervantes and (Isa) Velayo (at the Legends) and Martinez and (Buddy) Velayo (at the Masters) scored a combined net team total of 134.

Placing second is the quartet of Wan Sup Park, Soong Jan, Il Soo Bae and Soo Hwan Oh with 136 in the 18-hole event supported by hole-in-one sponsors Mitsubishi Motors, Northwest Airlines, Royal Caribbean International-Baron Travel Corp., Thai Airways and Wilson Sports.

"We would like to thank the general membership and employees of the club, as well as our sponsors, for making this tournament a huge success especially in terms of the number of participants who joined," said Manila Southwoods sports and games chair Freddie Mendoza, referring to the 282 players.

Nobody won the hole-in-one prizes worth P1.5 million.

Rener-Judith pair wins anew

RENER Mercado and Judith Anne Melencio sparked anew after topping the Standard and Latin American junior disciplines of the recent 4th Quarterly Ranking and Competitions under the auspices of the Dance Sport Council of the Philippines (DSCP) at the Waterfront Hotel in Lahug, Cebu.

Cited recently by the Philippine Sportswriters Association together with the DSCP headed by Becky Garcia for outstanding achievements in 2002, the youthful, multi-talented pair of Mercado, 12 and Melencio, 12 led the other two gold medal winners, namely John Erolle Melencio-Dearlie Gerodias (Grade A and Youth, Latin) and Doraldy Caballero and Janice Abanilla (Grade D and E, Latin).

The other winners were: Standard discipline—Rico Rosima and Paye Salvador (Grade A), Joel Ocasena and Linda Lagdameo (Grade B), Richard Cania and Lazel Gomez (Grade C), Joel Madera and Anabelle Madera (Grade D), Leodegario Merante Jr. and Maricris Hermosa (Grade E) and Benny Lao and Geraldine Darvine (Special event 2).

'Riles' dwellers denounce GMA for demolition of their shanties

By Agnes E. Donato

URBAN poor activists and informal settlers living along the railroad tracks in Caloocan City yesterday marched to Malacañang to denounce President Macapagal-Arroyo for the demolition of their shanties to give way to the rehabilitation of the Philippine National Railways.

"Violent demolitions and forced dislocation of the urban poor are one of the most inhumane and unjust forms of terrorism against the people," Carmen Deunida, chair of the urban poor group Kadamay, said.

"President Macapagal-Arroyo should be made to answer for all the beatings and arrests made by her goons and policemen against the poor who were merely fighting for their right to proper housing," she added.

Deunida claimed that members of the Metro Manila Development Authority, Housing and Urban Development Coordinating Council, and the National Housing Authority yesterday resumed the demolition of shanties in Caloocan, despite fierce opposition by local residents led by the Pagkakaibang Mamamayan sa Riles.

She said that many were injured and some residents and their supporters were detained for resisting the demolition.

"The urban poor are now bringing their case to Malacañang, which is responsible for putting our lives and welfare on the line in exchange for promises of modernization," Deunida said.

Housing and Urban Development Coordinating Council Head Michael Defensor and the National Housing Authority had earlier promised to relocate the affected residents to Tala, Caloocan and Townville in Bulacan.

New Nayong Pilipino to rise in Parañaque

By Leila B. Salaverria

CONSTRUCTION of the Bagong Nayong Pilipino will begin this month, according to Charito Planas, Nayong Pilipino executive director.

Planas made the announcement despite the absence of a Memorandum of Agreement with the Public Estates Authority, on whose land the new Filipino theme park will rise.

"We insist that even without the MOA, we'll have a surveyor study the area," Planas said at a Buong Puungan Forum last Wednesday. "Before the 15th of April, we'll put up the boundary markers."

She added that a billboard announcing the construction will rise along the Diosdado Macapagal Avenue.

The new 15-hectare park will be located near Aseana Avenue, Belle Avenue and Bay Boulevard behind the Aseana Business Park complex. The project's construction will be funded with P450 million from the management of the Ninoy Aquino International airport.

BLOWING HOT

Members of the Armed Forces of the Philippines band practice under the hot sun in preparation for turnover rites of the AFP chief command in Camp Aguinaldo in Quezon City. Lt. Gen. Narciso Abaya will replace Gen. Dionisio Santiago who is retiring on April 8.

Manila council begins 20-day session break

By Jerome Aning

MANILA city councilors have begun a 20-day break on Wednesday to attend to graduation rites and prepare for the Holy Week.

The break also coincided with the scheduled repair work of the City Council's session hall.

The council voted to take a "continuing recess" that would last until April 22.

This means the aldermen did not adjourn its session but only took an extended recess.

The city legislators will have time to attend graduation rites of pupils in their districts and observe Holy Week with their constituents.

Council president pro tempore Alejandro "Kun" Aduena, who presided over the session, explained that the recess does not mean aldermen are on vacation and would stop working.

"What was put on hold for the meantime are our legislative duties. But councilors can still do other forms of public service to their constituents and should be accessible to them at all times," he said.

THE LEAN, dusky vegetable vendor was complaining.

She said she never got to see how beautiful the young victim was.

The dead girl was supposed to be angelic, but her parents kept her coffin sealed throughout the wake.

No way they could let people view the cadaver, the vendor gasped.

She said the girl's face had been turned into a pulp, the most gory Halloween mask.

The innocent eyes popped out after the girl's face was smashed with a rock.

The girl's throat had also been slashed, the right arm crushed, its bone broken.

Yes, the seven-year-old lass was repeatedly raped, the vendor confirmed, and the shabu addicts also stuffed assorted garbage into her anus and sex organ.

This unofficial sidewalk autopsy was bared yesterday in a wet market in Huio, Mandaluyong City, not too far from the shallow creek where the body of Nina Gwenzel Eleneth Severino, 7, was fished out last week.

The girl had gone missing after being sent on an errand, the vendor related.

When they found her three days later, she was wrapped in a black plastic trash bag, rotting.

Mourners were crying as they brought her to her resting place near a new cockfight arena in Mandaluyong.

What followed was a quiet outrage.

They don't say it, but you could feel dread and anger among those affected by the drug-related crime.

Only a monster was capable of such an unspeakable crime, people swore.

Actually, four suspects had been apprehended. They all tested positive for illegal drugs.

Also yesterday, an earlier report that two of the suspects had been quietly eliminated was denied.

An informant said the suspects were actually shipped to Camp Crame to save them from possible lynching.

On Monday, Mayor Benhur Abalos reportedly lost his cool.

The youthful city executive demanded that other suspects behind the crime be arrested.

But it was hard to truly count how many people were behind the crime.

In fact, numerous profiteers continue to prosper by looking the other way as the drug monster continues to prowls city streets.

Who help feed the monster?

All those who profit in the illegal drug trade, including people who function inside city hall.

This finding was affirmed up with the help of informants who said pushers and drug lords are not the only ones who rake it in by feeding the drug monster.

BARE EYE

There was the case of a known pusher in Barangay Pitong Gantang (Mandaluyong), a certain Jimmy, who had been booked for drug-related offenses no less than three times.

He's again doing brisk business, cried Kagawad Side Manansa of Barangay Vergara.

Manansa had actually sought the assistance of this reporter when this Jimmy was last booked for pushing.

Manansa was frantic because, he said, we must beat the deadline before the nabbed pusher could again put up the required price for him to be released by his captors.

Manansa swore one of his sons, who was hooked on shabu and had to be rehabilitated, singled out this Jimmy as a top shabu supplier.

You want to be booked as pusher or plain user?

There's a price for everything, bared a sharp-nosed city hall insider, a civic worker who had a big hand in managing the successful electoral campaign of the city mayor.

This well-placed informant said the shameless accommodation being granted drug offenders has reached a point that it had affected the morale of the police.

Why would a policeman risk his life, he said, when in the end the cop would be the one scolded for having booked someone with the right connection?

This sickening malpractice was confirmed last Monday by a former classmate of this reporter who said they were chastised after they booked a pusher who turned out to be a relative of a top barangay official in Addition Hills.

Of course, what tops them all is this complaint from a newly elected elder city councilor, a well-respected expert in barangay affairs.

This political guru exposed a dirty practice in the judiciary branch, which he said continues to frustrate the efforts of Mayor Abalos to fight drug addiction in his turf.

How could the anti-drug campaign take off, the grizzled guru complained, when a release paper is already being typed up even before prosecutors could complete filing a drug case?

Mayor Benhur Abalos could only grin at this.

The best he could do was answer for all the funeral expenses of poor angelic Nina, the latest but not the last victim of the well-fed drug monster.

Stay calm but vigilant, police tell public

By Alcuin Papa and Jerome Aning

THE NATIONAL Capital Region Police Office yesterday called on Metro Manila residents to remain calm and vigilant following the bombing in Sasa Warf in Davao City on Wednesday.

NCRPO chief Deputy Director Gen. Reynaldo Velasco yesterday also assured the public that stricter security measures in vital installations and crowded areas in the metropolis, including posts, airports, and oil depots, are now in place.

"The danger signs are now more pronounced than ever after the second Davao bombing," Velasco said. "As we condemn this terrorist attack, it is incumbent upon all Metro Manila residents to also go on heightened vigilance against suspicious persons, packages and bomb threats," he stressed.

He said he has ordered more policemen to be deployed in strategic areas to ensure public visibility and maintain peace and order in Metro Manila.

At least 16 persons, including a 2-year-old baby were killed, and 54 others were injured in the bomb blast in Sasa Warf.

Velasco and Philippine National Police chief Director Gen. Hermogenes Ebdane yesterday also presented before media anti-terrorism posters and brochures for distribution and posting in vital transportation systems in the metropolis.

The NCRPO chief also urged the public to report suspicious-looking characters or mysterious packages they might find through the PNP Text 2910, the DILG Police Hotline 117 and the DOTC's Action Agad Hotline 7890.

"The cooperation of the public is vital to the effective anti-terrorism campaign of the government," Velasco said. "It is a shared responsibility between the police and citizenry."

The latest bombing in Davao was the second terrorist act in the city in barely a month. Earlier, a bomb exploded at the Davao airport killing about 20 people.

In Manila, a project engineer of the Light Rail Transit yesterday found a grenade placed in the path of a wheel of his car, which was parked along C.M. Recto Avenue in Sta. Cruz.

Engineer Rey Garcia found the Mark 2-fragmentation grenade at 9:30 a.m. yesterday, according to Insp. Lorenzo Molato of the Manila police's explosives and ordinance division.

Police said the grenade was wrapped in newspapers.

Reyes' car was parked below the LRT-2 Station at the corner of Recto and Evangelista Streets.

Reyes said he saw the bundle under a wheel of his car and kicked it away, and the grenade rolled out.

"I thought it was feces so I kicked it out of the way," he told the radio station RMN-Manila in an interview.

Although the grenade's safety pin and lever were intact, investigators said that if the car rolled over it, the grenade would have exploded and destroyed the car.

BENEFICIARIES of the Kinabukasan ng Kabataan livelihood program receive their educational kits from Presidential daughter Luli Macapagal-Arroyo, chair of the project. 'Help find my husband'

She also corrected an earlier report that identified her husband as an American national.

"My husband is Filipino," she said. "He's a son of a United States war veteran, but he was born and raised here."

Her husband "has never held a US passport," she added.

The Lehmanns' daughters are 15, 13 and 9 years old. "They are very strong children, they are not in a corner crying," their mother said.

She said she spoke to President Macapagal-Arroyo last March 29 to ask for help in having her husband released.

Lehmann is the president of Petnet, a money transfer company. He is active in his church, the Light-house Christian Community, in Mamburao, she said.

He has been known to bring medical and dental missions to Mamburao and to encourage his friends to invest in the area.

Rep. Josephine Ramirez-

Sato of Occidental Mindoro said the Army is helping in the investigation of the Lehmann kidnapping.

Rep. Sato said she believes Lehmann and his captors are still in Mindoro.

Speaking from Lucena City, Communist leader Gregorio "Ka Roger" Rosa, assured Lehmann's family that New People's Army rebels would help in the search for him and his captors.

Rosa said the rebels also want to clear the name of the NPA which was earlier blamed for the kidnapping.

The communist spokesperson in turn pointed to the military as the one behind the abduction of Lehmann.

"The group that abducted Lehmann could be elements of a criminal syndicate under the protection of the military," he said, "or they could be members of the military." Anne Luisa E. Villalino in Manila; Delfin T. Mallari Jr., PDI Southern Luzon Bureau

THE DAILY GOSPEL

Friday, April 4, 2003
4th Week of Lent

1st Reading:

Gospel:

Jesus went around Galilee; he would not go about in Judea because the Jews wanted to kill him. Now the Jewish feast of the Tabernacles was at hand.

But after his brothers had gone to the festival, he also went up, not publicly but in secret.

Some of the people of Jerusalem said, "Is this not the man they want to kill? And here he is speaking freely, and they don't say a word to him? Can it be that the rulers know that this is really the Christ? Yet we know where this man comes from, but when the Christ appears, no one will know where he comes from."

So Jesus announced in a loud voice in the Temple court where he was teaching, "You say that you know me and know where I come from. I have not come of myself, I was sent by the One who is true, and you don't know him. I know him for I come from him and he sent me."

They would have arrested him, but no one laid hands on him because his time had not yet come.

Commentary

"I have not come of myself" This is a theme that runs through Jesus' life as well as his understanding of his ministry. As a young man, visiting with his parents in Jerusalem, he stayed behind in the temple to talk with elders. When asked by his parents why he had done such, his response was that he was going about his Father's business. Now, almost at the end of his earthly ministry, Jesus is saying the same thing. It's his Father's business he's about. It's his Father who has sent him. He didn't come on his own. It was the perfect obedience of a Son to the will of his Father. We too could know the Father in such a deep and personal way if only we follow in the path Jesus himself had set. That path is one of knowing not about God, but of knowing him personally. No matter how religious we might be, no matter how pious and devout our religious practices, no matter how faithful we are in obeying the laws of our religion, without a personal encounter and relationship with God, a great deal of our religiosity will really feel empty and hollow. We must come to know God in a very profound way by coming to him and knowing that he too is our Father.

NPDO drug unit abolished

Shootout among cops draws ire of district chief

By Tina Santos

NORTHERN Police District Office director Senior Supt. Marcelino Franco Jr. has abolished the district's Drug Enforcement Group following Tuesday night's shootout among lawmen at a police outpost in Caloocan City. PO3 Eduardo Gaddi was killed in the shootout, while DEG chief Reynaldo Orante and SPO4 Jorge Tabayag were seriously wounded. Franco said the 22-man unit was disbanded on Wednesday. In a phone interview, Franco told the INQUIRER that the affected lawmen would be assigned to police offices in the Camanava (Caloocan, Malabon, Navotas, Valenzuela) area. Franco said that, aside from the shooting incident, there were other factors that contributed to his decision to dissolve the unit. He did not reveal what the factors were. But according to a police source, the unit was abolished because it had been the subject of many complaints. The source claimed that a number of complainants had accused the DEG members of selling the illegal drugs seized from peddlers. The source also said that members of the unit would readily drop the charges against arrested drug suspects in exchange for money. "The DEG had become a milking cow of corrupt cops," the source said. Franco said drug cases would now be handled by the four police offices in his district. He added that once he sees the need to form another drug unit, he will only recruit new officers for the task. Franco also revealed that he has also turned over the DEG case to the Criminal Investigation and Detection Group to avoid perception of a whitewash. After the incident, Franco immediately ordered the DEG members to undergo drug tests. On Tuesday night, PO3 Gaddi reportedly shot it out with DEG chief Orante and SPO4 Tabayag inside the DEG post on Langaray Street, Dagatagan, Caloocan. According to the initial report, Gaddi confronted his superiors at around 10:15 p.m. after he learned that he was going to be transferred to the Valenzuela Police. A shootout erupted at the height of the argument. One of the shooters reportedly even emptied his ammunition clip on Gaddi's body. Orante, Tabayag and SPO2 Manolito Manalo are all facing homicide charges and possible dismissal from the force.

Warring gangs make peace behind bars

By Lella Salaverria

WARRING gangs at the New Bilibid Prisons yesterday took an unprecedented step when they forged a peace agreement among themselves. The jail gangs signed the "peace accord" yesterday, the 68th birthday of NBP Director Ricardo Macala. He hailed the peace agreement as one of the best birthday gifts he has ever received. "The peace pact" had been my Christmas wish, but I didn't get it (then)," Macala said during a program celebrating his birthday. "Now, I didn't ask for peace but I got it." When he addressed the prisoners, Macala also dispelled the rumor that he would be sacked at the start of this month. He also said that it was not true that he has been getting P5 from each of the inmates' food budget and keeping the amount for himself or that he allows drugs to be brought inside prison. He said that he has tried his best to do what is right for the NBP. During the ceremony, which the inmates allegedly organized themselves, Macala received from the inmates a wooden image of the Holy Family and a painting done by prison artists. The gang leaders also took the stage and sang the '80s hit "We Are the World." As a result of the agreement, prison officials may expect a decrease in the number of rumbles this year, according to an inmate. He said those who would defy the agreement would be sanctioned. Earlier this year, 12 of the 13 jail gang leaders threatened to hold a rally in support of convict Rey Yap, who had been hauled off to the disciplinary cell for alleged possession of fake cash. Yap had accused prison officials of planting the evidence to pin him down.

Knabbed

THE BODY of an unidentified man, who was stabbed several times, was fished out of a creek in Binondo, Manila on Monday. The man was described as about 40 years old and stood at about 5-foot-4. He was wearing a dirty white shirt and a blue and white basketball pants, said Detective Edson Bertoldo of the Western Police District. The body was found at 9:15 a.m. at the Muelle De Divisoria off Juan Luna Street in Binondo. The body, already in advanced state of decomposition, was taken to the Popular Funeral Home for autopsy. Philip Tubaza

Shot

ILLEGAL drugs might have something to do with the murder of a woman in Quezon City Wednesday night. The unidentified victim was described as about 43 years old and was wearing a yellow t-shirt and denim pants. Her body, which bore several gunshots, was taken to the Lanting General Hospital. Central Police District officials said the woman was shot at around 7 p.m. while she was walking on Magnolia Street, Barangay Talipapa, Novaliches. Witnesses said two men on a motorcycle opened fire on the victim and fled after making sure that she was dead. Alvin Papa

Hanged

RAYMOND Constantino, 29, of Barangay Barangka, Marikina City, allegedly committed suicide after he fought with his wife and mother yesterday. Senior Supt. Leonardo Espina, Marikina City police chief, said the victim's mother, Consuelo, 55, found Constantino's body hanging in the kitchen at around 6 a.m. Consuelo also found a three-page note, supposedly written by her son just before he died. PO3 Virgilio Cayetano Jr. of the Marikina police said Consuelo and the victim's wife, Ingrid, had a quarrel with Constantino over the latter's drug habit. Nelson Flores

MANDALUYONG Mayor Benjamin Abalos Jr. on Wednesday commended the local police force for cracking the case of the seven-year-old girl who was raped and slain last week. According to police records, the body of Nina Guenzel Searino, a resident of Barangay Huio, Mandaluyong City, was found floating in a shallow creek on March 26. Her body, which bore torture marks, was wrapped in a black plastic bag. Police said there were indications that she had been raped. Police said Severino was last seen on March 24 in the company of tricycle drivers Merino Pedrosa, 28, Tomas Ortega, 28, Danny Gonzales, 24, and Danilo Ramos, 48. After they were arrested, the suspects tested positive for illegal drugs, police said. A 12-year-old boy reportedly witnessed the crime and identified the suspects in a police lineup. Nelson Flores

Tribute to commercial makers who make us believe in dreams

PEOPLE who have worked with him know TV commercial (TVC) director Vittorio Romero, or Vitt, as a guy who is always in control.

Among Vitt's works are Marl Kaimo's "Hi-bang" for PLDT, Metrobank's "Titanic," Freddie Aguilar for Gold Eagle using his hit "Anak," Duty Free's "Tonyo," and Tanduay's "Indiana Jones" with the late Anthony Alonzo.

He directed 30-second TVCs with Sharon Cuneta and Aga Muhlach for Selecta ice Cream, Aiko Melendez for Rexona, and Donita Rose and Lucy Torres for Lux. He has also worked with Mikee Cojuangco, Robert Jaworski, Dawn Zulueta and Lea Salonga.

Yet, while Vitt has taken the credit for his reputable TV ads, he shares the glory with the other "unsung" heroes in advertising, his fellow directors. He introduces the men behind the TV ads in his own website (<http://www.vitromero.com>).

"I am blessed to be in a business where I know that I am surrounded by people who continue to inspire and encourage me to do great things," allows Vitt, whose father Dante named him after the late Italian filmmaker Vittorio de Sica.

"Making a commercial is no easy task. A lot of things have to be done. And while being a director means being in charge, I cannot own all the credit. There are also production designers, acting coaches, cinematographers, stylists and, of course, film directors."

Vitt considers the directors his friends in the business. Some of them are even his mentors.

"Without their help, I am literally nothing. Commercials would not be the same and we'd have one less thing to be proud of," he says.

In an effort to globalize Philippine advertising, Vitt has conceptualized an extensive web-

Jorja's answered prayer

By Maribel R. Cruz

TELEVISION actress Jorja Fox is no stranger to violence: She plays criminal scene investigator Sara Sidle in the top-rating "CSI: Crime Scene Investigation," aired on cable TV over AXN.

But Fox, who has been exposed to numerous cases of death and suffering in the action-adventure series is against the ongoing US-led attack on Iraq.

"I send all my prayers to the people of Iraq, especially to the women and children," she told a group of Southeast Asian writers in a recent conference.

Divided Americans

"Now is a very tense time in the United States," she said. "Never have the citizens of America been this divided over an issue since the Vietnam War in the early seventies. I really hope that the split would turn out into something positive."

"CSI," which is on its third season, is about a team of forensic investigators, led by senior forensics officer Gil Grissom (William Peterson), and the crimes they solve with high-tech gadgets by assessing pieces of evidence gathered at the crime scene.

Fox, 34, who is based in California, describes "CSI" as "an anti-violent series that presents people in the worst days of their lives."

Rave reviews

"It's a show that has subjects most Americans would not want to talk about," she said.

Despite the serious nature of the topics tackled in the show, "CSI" is continuously garnering rave reviews in the US.

Fox attributes the show's success to the sense of security it conveys to its viewers.

"It makes it look very difficult to get away from some crime," she explained.

The show's producers hired a team of technical advisers and arranged for crime laboratories in Las Vegas and Los Angeles to be open for cast members of "CSI" to use, according to Fox. This, she said, is primarily to help train the actors for their roles as forensic investigators.

Traditional way

"Reading medical trivia books also helped me understand my role better," she said. "I have always been fascinated with science."

Fox landed the role of Sara in a "very traditional way."

"I went to the audition, read a part, and then left," she recalled. "I got a call from one of the show's producers a few days later asking for a meeting."

After two seasons, Fox has learned to adapt Sara's brazen attitude and Excessive focus on gossip

LOCAL entertainment has become so scandalous and gossip-oriented that really important developments are given short shrift by show biz talk shows on TV and the entertainment portions of regular newscasts.

Thus, in 2002, little coverage was provided of some major issues like the MMFF subsidy share of Mowelfund being cut down, the movie bill that has now been into law, the start of operations of the new Film Development Council of the Philippines, problems at the Film Academy of the Philippines, the exploitation and moral pollution engendered by the sex-film craze, etc.

Instead, many hours have been spent chronicling cheap spats between minor celebrities initially intriguing but now tedious romances, the Kris-Joey-Alma imbroglio, new bold stars' true confessions, and any number of marital break-ups and one-night stands.

Granted, these are "colorful" developments, but what do they really add to the entertainment scene on a long-term basis? Here's where we separate the entertainment journalist from the hack and it looks like most TV people who survey the local show biz scene belong to the second category.

This focus on gossip does a disservice to the few people in the industry who are trying to do good, innovative work, despite the field's generally quickie and sleazy orientation.

These exceptional workers may be in the minority, but that makes their contributions all the more laudable and worthy of extensive coverage in show biz reports.

The situation also does a disservice to the millions of people who comprise the local entertainment audience. If the media feed them mostly gossip and scandal, their interest in entertainment will remain at that low level.

Indeed, the national obsession with personalities and disdain for issues can partly be attributed to the miseducation they have been receiving from media coverage of the show biz scene.

An exception to the rule was the media coverage of the Nida Blanca murder case. Sure, it ended up being excessive, but the case was an important one due to the star-victim's stature, so some of the intense media attention was merited.

Unfortunately, it got to the point where it was just going around in circles, because too many new theories were being floated, and there was the feeling that the real motives weren't being touched on. It's important therefore, that media should keep reminding investigators to keep on top of the case, because its well-loved victim and her many friends and fans continue to cry out for justice.

VIEWFINDER

Nestor U. Torre

As for other real and concocted "issues" that will "enliven" the show biz scene this year, we should try harder to focus on the really significant developments, that can affect the entertainment we get for years to come, instead of the tawdry tussles that are staged to get them dim, little starlets their 15 seconds of "fame." OK, give them their 15 seconds, but don't stretch them out to three weeks!

"The Amazing Twins" stars Jimmy Lun and Tae, it tells the story of Charlie and Gary, two boys raised in ordinary circumstances by their known parents but whose lives would take different turns as they uncover one mystery after another.

Charlie (Jimmy Lun) is the son of a rich gangster. Though intelligent, his manners leave much to be desired. He behaves like a gangster and enjoys making fun of others. Gary (Tae) is the son of a poor couple who lives out in the mountains.

passion for work.

She used to get very queasy whenever Sara is made to stretch pigskin or examine the contents of the stomach of a dead child.

"She is much smarter and courageous than I am," the actress said of her CSI character. "But I'm as focused as she is when it comes to my craft."

Fox started acting at age 6, and was involved mostly with independent theater productions when she was in high school.

She first appeared on NBC's top-rated series "ER" as the lesbian resident intern Dr. Maggie Doyle. She was also featured as the master thief Pallas in the futuristic film "Velocity Trap," and Delmar Youngblood in "Hungry Bachelors Club," a story about love and friendship.

Fox also played the role of secret service agent Gina Toscano in Aaron Sorkin's Emmy award-winning drama "The West Wing."

GARY V AT THE PODIUM

A mall show with a full-concert feel

By Margaux Ortiz

EVEN THE posh white walls of the high-end Ortigas mall, the Podium, seemed charged with anticipation as an excited crowd gathered at the main lobby awaiting the appearance of Mr. Pure Energy himself, Gary Valenciano.

The World of Music special at the Podium last March 28 was meant to promote two of Gary V's recent albums as part of his yearlong 20th anniversary celebration. The first was "Beyond Words," a compilation of his classic hits as interpreted by the country's top session and jazz artists. The second was "Gary V at the Movies," featuring popular movie themes he sang through the years.

But before the crowd could actually sing with one of the most talented performers in the local music scene and dance to his music, they first had a breathtaking pre-Gary V treat. Classical and jazz musicians like Terry Undag (flugelhorn), Renato Lucas (cello), Ronnie Marqueses (trombone) and Jay Cayuca (electric violin) paid homage to the music of Gary V by playing songs included in "Beyond Words."

At first, one couldn't help but be skeptical at this new project. After all, what is a Gary V song without the voice and the signature dance moves that come with it? And is it really possible to transform his compositions into entirely classical or jazz pieces?

But after listening to Undag, Lucas, Marqueses and Cayuca interpret the songs with such verve and passion and add a new and personal flavor to each composition, one could conclude that it really is possible. And the audience seemed to agree, enthusiastically whistling and roaring during each performance.

From Lucas' soothing rendition of "Sana

HERE FOR YOU. Gary V makes a vow.

Maulit Muli," Undag and Marqueses' spunky and jazzy "What More Can I Say" and "Each Passing Night," and finally to Cayuca's electrifying "Take Me Out of the Dark," everything seemed to be a fitting introduction to the inimitable man whose 20 years as a performer has encouraged many an aspiring artist to follow in his nimble footsteps.

When program host Vanessa Mayuga finally confirmed it was Gary V's turn to be on stage, the crowd just went wild.

"People ask me what inspires me to write a song, and I say it can be a look, a story, or what I'm going through," Gary told his adoring audience. "And to hear the musicians play the music in their own way, it does something to my soul, it makes me realize how blessed I am."

He first sang "Reaching Out to You" and, as expected, the screams became louder.

Gary V then asked the audience what he should do next. Fervent female voices rose above the crowd shouting "Kailangan Kita," referring to the theme of the Aga Muhlach-Claudine Barretto starrer which raked money at the tills last year. He gladly granted their request, which of course, elicited more squeals of pleasure from his fans.

Although singing "Kailangan Kita" required minimal bodily activity from Gary, its effect on everyone was the same as when he did his more energetic numbers, such as the next song, "Di Bale Na Lang Kaya."

For his last number, Gary sang the theme from "Nine Mornings," the movie that starred Donita Rose and Piolo Pascual.

"Even during these very difficult times, I promise that I will be here for you," Gary V reassured the crowd.

"Even after the autograph signing at the end of the program, I will still be with you, just like He will be with you."

Only Mr. Pure Energy can make you feel that you've just been to a major concert—complete with the songs, dances and the incomparable dynamism—when all you've been to is the mall.

"Beyond Words" will have another performance at The Podium on April 26.

Tribute to commercial makers site which includes not just the profile and background but even the contact numbers of TV commercial directors.

"It's time to help the people who have helped me get to where I am now in the advertising world," he says. "With the emergence of top Filipino filmmakers and the presence of foreign directors in the local scene, we in advertising have to go global."

Selected videos

Vitt attests working on the website is not easy. He had to get permits from the multinational companies to show selected videos and even behind-the-scenes clips of making the commercials. The website also includes photos and the works of the directors.

Vitt laments how some commercial directors have retired without getting any recognition.

"Unlike in films, no one knows who the director of a TV ad is," he explains. "With this website, I am also enjoining others to open their respective websites to showcase their works."

Vitt cites Dindo Angeles, the man who helped catapult Lumen to national stardom.

"He (Dindo) brought out the humanity of our often-neglected hero, the housewife. Who would have thought that banking on an ordinary character would lead to extraordinary results?"

Great admirers

Jun Urbano, Mr. Shook to most TV viewers, is Remy Banong, the dean of advertising film directors, according to Vitt.

"Philippine commercials have achieved a world-class quality and are able to stand against their foreign counterparts because of him."

Vitt adds Raul Jorjolan to his list of noted directors. Jorjolan is someone who has the mind of a creative director.

"The marriage of both minds are clearly reflected in the commercials he makes. Because of him, TV ads have embraced that GenText feel that has become so popular among our biggest and most important audiences: the youth."

Vitt says that at the Ateneo de Manila University, where he was artistic director of Tanghalang Ateneo, Jun Reyes was a figure he looked up to. Reyes, he says, produced "some of the most astonishing commercials in local advertising," including Aga Muhlach's Jolibe series.

Vitt also counts Jeric Soriano, son of veteran actor Nestor de Villa, as one of the most beloved film directors in the advertising industry. It was Jeric who made Alice Dixon a household name with Palmolive soap's "I Can Feel It."

"All who have worked with Jeric have become great admirers and friends," Vitt says.

Manolo Abaya, who did Vilma Santos' Eskrol ads, is one of the most innovative directors. "He is also the most innovative person I've encountered," Vitt says. "Everything he does becomes an artistic expression of beauty. His work has helped define pop culture as we know it."

Another stalwart is the award-winning Mandy Reyes, who revolutionized food filmmaking in the country. "The industry is very grateful to his breakthrough achievements," says Vitt.

Maning Rivera is the original king of pomp and pageantry in Philippine advertising. "His commercials (like Gloria Romero's Manang Biday for Superwheel) have made us all believe in dreams."

Dante Dato's commercials "are a celebration of life, making you want to join the party and celebrate life as well." He did San Miguel Beer's "She-Boom," with Rachel Lobangco.

Raymund Red has caught the attention of the world for his attention to detail and impeccable work. "I am one with the rest of the country standing in awe of this wonderful director and waiting for his future work," Vitt says.

Joey Agbayan's youth and vibrancy can be seen in his work, Vitt says.

Constantly changing

Mario Sarmiento reminds Vitt that advertising is constantly changing. "He brings in all the new ideas and created an even better advertising world."

Teddy Catuira focuses on dramatic commercials, "which make him truly someone to watch out for."

Yam Laranas may have made his mark in the movies, but his talents can also be seen in the commercials he makes. "His originality and creativity have made the world of advertising welcome him with open arms."

Henry Prejas has proven that even that young people are a force to reckon with. "His excellence should make all of us feel lucky to have him in our league."

Other established directors are Socky Fernandez, Ona Diaz, Nap Jamir, Mae Paner, Pablo Biglang-Awa, Edward Go, G-Boy Visitan and Peque Gallaga.

"We have to appreciate these people who give us a reprieve from all the worrying and the fretting that occupy us," Vitt says.

The website will also contain information about cinematographers, more aptly known as directors of photography, such as Maning Roxas, Boy Yllaguez, Rody Lucap, Leslie Garchitorena, the late Conrado Baltazar and Vic Sempio, the first Filipino cinematographer to do Hollywood commercials.

Stocks end up on Iraq hopes

STOCKS ended higher yesterday, shrugging off another deadly bombing in Davao City, with investors encouraged to hunt for bargains as signs emerged of a quick end to the war in Iraq, traders said.

STOCKS/B4

WASHINGTON—The Iraq war is delaying a global recovery just as the authorities run low on ammunition to stir growth, the World Bank warned yesterday.

The Iraq war has cast a shadow over the economic and political landscape for months, said the bank's Global Development Finance 2003 report, drawn up in the run-up to combat.

"The recovery in the global economy has likely been delayed further while downside risks have risen, especially for countries in and around the Middle East," it said.

Economic growth would be sluggish even if the Iraq war was resolved quickly, it said.

World economic output was expected to expand 2.3 percent in 2003, up from 1.7 percent growth last year.

Growth in rich countries was set to rise to 1.9 percent this year from 1.4 percent last year. In developing countries, growth would accelerate to 4 percent in 2003 from 3.1 percent.

The threats of terror, deflation and a war-related rise in oil prices menaced an otherwise bright outlook for East Asian economies, the World Bank noted.

East Asia and Pacific economies are expected to grow 6.4 percent this year, slightly down from 6.7 percent in 2002.

Exceptions to the rosy outlook were Hong Kong and Singapore, where growth had faltered, and Indonesia, still reeling from the Oct. 12, 2002, bombing of a Bali nightclub in which 202 people were killed. The spread of the deadly flu-like viral disease is also adding to the pessimism in these economies.

Industrialized nations had boosted fiscal stimulus and cut interest rates, cushioning the world from an even sharper slump, the bank said.

These measures, however, had also deepened deficits.

The US current account deficit—its shortfall in overall financial dealings with the outside world—had expanded to an unprecedented 5 percent of annual gross domestic product (GDP).

"In this challenging financial environment, the global rebound is lacking sectoral and geographical balance," the report said.

Polymakers now had less space to cut taxes, boost spending or lower interest rates, it said.

"A worrisome characteristic of the current economic environment is that macroeconomic policies may be running up against their limits," the World Bank report said.

By Clarissa S. Batino

FOREIGN portfolio investments in March yielded a net inflow of $16.8 million, reversing a $1.6-million net outflow in February, as rising interest rates encouraged investors to place modest funds in the Philippines' financial markets.

Data submitted to the Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas by five custodian banks showed that in the first three months of the year, net inflow stood at a modest $34.3 million from $96.9 million during the same period last year.

In March alone, net inflow slid 33 percent from $25.1 million the previous year.

While the local currency remained weak in the first two weeks of March—dropping to a record closing low of 55.099 to a dollar on March 12—local interest rates had begun moving up.

The benchmark 91-day treasury bill rate rose to its highest level in 14 months to 7.145 percent on Monday, as the central bank decided to scrap the tiering system on overnight borrowing that paid a decreasing rate on bank deposits.

Government officials admit interest rates will continue to rise and, while unfavorable for state financing, provide incentives to foreign fund managers.

Foreign portfolio funds are normally invested in stocks, government securities, mutual funds and insurance.

The level of inbound funds in the first three months plunged to $174.7 million against $375.5 million in the first quarter of 2002.

Outbound funds also fell to $140.4 million in the first quarter from $278.6 million a year earlier.

The inflow of $50.2 million and outflow of $33.4 million in March are three times lower than the $146 million and $120.9 million a year ago, although the level of inbound funds has slightly improved from $45 million in February.

Net portfolio investments grew 194 percent last year to $202 million against $68.7 million in 2001.

Analysts said investors everywhere were jittery over the uncertain global situation, although risks in the local market were seen to be greater given the volatile local currency and wobbly fiscal sector.

Still, the central bank said it was expecting more portfolio funds in the coming months, alongside an increase in foreign direct investment, as the economy continued to perform well despite the challenges.

The economy grew 5.8 percent in the fourth quarter. The government said gross domestic product should improve by between 4 and 4.5 percent in the first quarter.

Return on investments, people participation in agriculture

By Ernesto O. Ordoñez

THE UNTAPPED potential of agriculture in the Philippines is amazing. The high but not sufficiently recognized return on investment, or ROI, in this important sector should encourage more investments and optimal resource allocation.

High ROI projects

Consider the following examples:
• For P650 worth of certified seeds in a hectare, paddy yield increased nationally from an average of 3.2 to 4.5 tons in the

COMMENTARY

At the conservatively low assumed price of P7 a kilo, this is an additional P9,100 in revenue.

• For P1,000 worth of organic fertilizer added to the usual chemical fertilizer, average paddy yield per hectare increased in Bohol by 1.5 tons. This is an additional P10,500 in income.

• My own personal experience using certified sweet potato planting material from the Visayas College of Agriculture worth P3,300 yielded 25 tons per hectare. This is five times the national average yield from traditional planting material. At P2 a kilo, this meant an additional income of P40,000 in just three months.

The above are decisions taken by individuals for their respective farms. But for group projects, organized people participation as mandated by law can help in optimal resource allocation to support high ROI projects.

'Pagkain Para Sa Masa'

There was a very successful integrated group project that was motivated by the severe El Niño experience in late 1997 and early 1998. During that time, upland farmers faced severe food shortages in several areas of Mindanao. Because of this, thousands of upland farmers picketed NPA warehouses asking for rice in Cotabato, Sultan Kudarat and General Santos City. Desperate farmers even resorted to eating an indigenous poisonous crop called kayas, which resulted in several deaths.

To address this problem, a program for Mindanao upland farmers was conceptualized by Professors Edwin and Rosa Fe Honrade of the University of Southern Mindanao; Dr. Virgilio Oliva, USM president; and Dr. Santiago Obien, then executive director of Phil Rice. The program, called "Pagkain Para Sa Masa," involved the collaboration of various agencies involved in food production such as the USM, Department of Agriculture, local government units, farm associations, and non-government organizations.

It entailed providing access of planting materials for upland rice, corn, root crops (cassava, sweet potato, taro, etc.), vegetables, fruit trees and native chicken. The distribution of these products was accompanied with training through the Upland Public Education Campaign. "Pagkain Para Sa Masa" became a replicable model of the Research, Production, and Extension strategy in Mindanao. USM acted as the national and regional center for various crops which screened the best upland rice, root crops, and vegetables. These were then given to farmers in specially packed planting material packages complete with technical advice. A memo of cooperation was signed by 48 municipal mayors and 470 barangay captains committing at least a hectare in their respective areas to set up food nurseries. This included a replication and distribution component providing the multiplier effect for the project.

People participation

Through the multiplication of planting materials and native chicken, approximately 5,000 targeted families who are an average of only one meal a day were able to eat three meals. Assuming six members of the family at an assumed low price of P4 per meal, this translates to an annual return for the P3.5-million investment of P87.6 million. Unfortunately, other than a replication done in Camp Abu Bakar to help the victims of the MILF conflict, this project did not get any other significant support. It lost out to other projects with lower ROIs in a manner that was not transparent to the community.

People participation

Unlike some other departments in government, the DA is fortunate in having people participation mandated by law. In Executive Order 116, it stipulates that "the National Agriculture and Fishery Council shall act as an advisory body and serve as the forum for consultative and continuing discussions within the agriculture sector." In addition, "It shall be replicated down to the regional, provincial, and municipal levels."

Stakeholders, such as small farmers and fisherfolk, are therefore entitled to a voice in the decision making process. Today, the Agriculture and Fisheries Councils are consulted on selected projects of the DA. To follow the spirit of the law that encourages people participation, it is recommended that these councils be given the total picture of not only all the DA programs and their corresponding budgets but also those of the LGUs. The councils can then discuss and recommend the projects with high ROIs for priority resource allocation. In this case, ROI is defined in the broader sense of socio-economic returns, with investments including non monetary inputs. With the combination of ROI consciousness and more meaningful people participation through the Agriculture and Fisheries Councils, high ROI programs, like "Pagkain Para Sa Masa," will get a more appropriate and bigger share of scarce resources. Only then will the untapped potential of agriculture be fully realized in our country.

Palay harvest to hit 5.8M metric tons

AGRICULTURE officials are expecting a better-than-expected first semester palay harvest of 5.8 million metric tons on assessments that the effects of the El Niño weather disturbance have been not as severe as anticipated.

The Department of Agriculture and the National Food Authority said the forecast meant an increase in the country's rice production.

Last year, rice farms only produced some 5.6 million metric tons.

"There are initial indications that palay harvests in the first six months could hit 5.8 million metric tons as compared to the 5.6 million metric tons made last year," NPA Deputy Administrator Gregorio Tan Jr. said in a news conference yesterday.

The projected increase in palay harvests in the first half may allow the Philippines to achieve its target of 14.2 million metric tons this year, allowing the government to depend less on imports.

Undercurrents in Urdaneta

THE NORMALLY neighborly board elections for the Urdaneta Village homeowners association is turning out to be a highly charged partisan fight.

The unspoken rule in the exclusive village is that an incumbent board is allowed to stay on for three years despite the supposed annual voting exercise.

But the year-old all-female board of Tessie Yungco, Victoria Carballo, Maritess Suplico, Frannie Jacinto, and female-chaser Rodolfo Cuenca is now being challenged head-on by six-term Randy Limjoco, backed by his kagawad (barangay councilor) wife, Cecile.

Limjoco's slate includes Noreen Trota, Dr. Benjamin Almurung, and Jerry Iru. His other candidate, Antonino Alindogan Jr., decided he did not want the headache and backed out.

According to the grapevine, Limjoco is particularly irritated at the current board whom he suspects as having leaked to Cocktales a shooting incident last year.

In that incident, an elderly Urdaneta resident, Lourdes Eristingco, has filed a court case against the Limjocos after a Camp Crame ballistic report concluded that the bullet that hit the Eristingco home was fired from the Limjoco house across the street.

Despite being incumbents, the all-female board feels it is running an uphill battle in the April 10 elections considering that, among others, the Limjoco wife has built a network among the matrons in the village with her P250,000/year ballroom dancing budget—enabling the kagawad to hold weekly dancing lessons in the village—provided by the City Hall.

Good fences make good neighbors

FORMER UP Law professor Soledad Cagampang-de Castro and her lawyer husband Arturo de Castro have been ordered ejected by the Nasagbu Municipal Trial Court from a neighbor's beachfront property the De Castros forcibly fenced off last year.

In addition, Judge Rolando Siang ordered the De Castros to pay their neighbors, Enrique and Josephine Zabarte, P5,000 a month in restitution from April 2002 when they built at gunpoint a hollow block fence on the disputed property, thus eating up about 960 square meters of the Zabarte land.

The De Castros, who claimed that they own the disputed property and that they were merely tolerating the Zabartes' possession prior to selling the property to them, said they would appeal the decision.

But still, Judge Siang said, quoting a Supreme Court decision, the De Castros should not have resorted to "force, intimidation, threat, strategy or stealth" to forcibly re-acquire the land, especially since they had consented in writing to the Zabartes' improvements on them.

COCKTALES

Victor C. Agustin

"Possession of a piece of property maybe wholly precarious or unrighteous, yet if the possessor has in favor priority of time, he has this security, that he is entitled to stay upon the property until he is put off lawfully by a person having better right," said a Supreme Court ruling, promulgated way back in 1910.

Meanwhile, the disbarment case filed against the lawyer-couple had been thrown out by the Integrated Bar of the Philippines, which ruled that the De Castros had acted as "private citizens," not as lawyers, when they forcibly took over the disputed property.

"What the IBP decision means is that lawyers may now take the law into their own hands and get away with illegal acts," said Enrique Zabarte.

The Zabartes, residents of Valle Verde, own the Sacred Heart School in Novales.

Ambassadorial wrath

DASMARINAS Village Association president, former Ambassador Isabel Caro Wilson, is determined to rid the enclave of unauthorized nurseries and kindergartens once and for all.

According to the pro-Wilson grapevine, the former diplomat is serious in finally ejecting two "illegal" preschools in the subdivision, the International Center for Beginning Beginners (ICBB) and Little Tots.

Wilson is particularly singling out ICBB since the school allegedly has been playing hide-and-seek with the Dasma board for the last seven years, renting out different houses within the village year after year in a dodged effort to elude an ejection order from the board.

Heard through the grapevine

A NEW York-based investment banker is being suspected by Malacanang as the source of the recent leaks trying to implicate the First Family to an alleged shakedown attempt against the German principals of the controversial NAIA Terminal 3 project.

Local telecom firms hit US agency's order

By Ronnel W. Domingo

LOCAL telecommunications firms said a March 31 order from the US Federal Communications Commission telling US telcos to resume payments to local telcos amounted to "a real case of whipsawing" or pitting one firm against another for better deals.

Lawyer Rogelio Quevedo, chief of Smart Communications Inc.'s legal affairs, noted that the US FCC order allowed for the resumption of payments to only two local telcos—BayanTel and Digital Telecommunications (Digital).

"They want the local telcos fighting.

We are the ones being whipsawed," Quevedo said.

In March, the US FCC ordered all US telcos to stop payments to Philippine telcos for calls received here. The order was based on complaints filed by AT&T and WorldCom accusing six Philippine telcos of whipsawing and that the latter were blocking their circuits against calls from the United States.

On Monday, the US FCC lifted the suspension of payments to Philippine telcos after AT&T and WorldCom reported that connections with BayanTel and Digital were on-line again.

National Telecommunications Commission (NTC) chief Armi Jane Borje said the latest US FCC order also seemed to show conflict.

"One (US telco) said there was no blocking from the very start. This supports the NTC stand that our telcos have said they are not blocking (calls from the US)," Borje said.

Gov't to auction IS property in June

By Clarissa S. Batino

THE INTER AGENCY Privatization Council has approved the sale in June of the government's 4.5-hectare prime property in Makati that used to house the International School.

One of the first big-tucker items scheduled for privatization this year, the property was originally valued at P45,000 per square meter or about P2 billion.

Selling the real estate at a good price would allow the government to meet its P1-billion privatization target for the year.

In 2002, the state sold less than P500 million worth of assets although an additional P1 billion in revenue from the sale a year ago of its stake in Philippine Phosphate and Fertilizer Corp. came in during the year.

Before the local government of Makati expressed its interest to buy the property last year, at least three big names including Ayala Land Inc. and Robinson's Land were reportedly keen on the former IS lot.

Finance Undersecretary Eric Recto said the government was still waiting for a second appraisal before they could put an indicative price on the property.

"We will publish the notices by the third week of April," Recto said.

The government had been trying to sell the IS property during the last three years but an anemic real estate sector had stymied government efforts to sell the land.

The International School vacated the property in year 2000 when its lease with the government expired.

The Makati City had withdrawn from an earlier plan to buy the prime lot although Recto was not ruling out the possibility that the local government would bid for the property in June.

BOC exceeds 1st quarter goal

THE BUREAU of Customs (BOC) announced that it has collected P26.796 billion for the first quarter of this year, overshooting its target by P4.269 billion.

The BOC's performance for the first quarter of 2003 surpassed the same period last year.

Actual collection for March reached P9.098 billion, exceeding the P7.816-billion forecast by P1.282 billion. The March collection was also 16.4 percent higher than the March 2002 collection of P6.982 billion.

"All major ports have continued to post record performances, and we are optimistic that the BOC will continue to meet its targets," said BOC Commissioner General Ramon S. Bantagan.

The government has put the national government on track and kept the deficit within its target.

The government is targeting a budget deficit of P55.2 billion in the first quarter, and P202 billion for the whole year.

DESPITE SLOW START

BPI sees better '03 net profit

By Elena R. Torrijos

BANK of the Philippine Islands (BPI) said yesterday it expected better profits this year despite a slow start in the first quarter.

BPI president Xavier Loinaz said consumer loan demand was growing, although the corporate side—particularly in the manufacturing sector—remained weak.

Loinaz said it would be hard to predict how the bank would perform in 2003 given the global uncertainties from the Iraq war but it should do better than last year's profit of P5.2 billion.

"The aspiration is always to improve, improve, improve," he told reporters on the sidelines of the bank's annual shareholders' meeting. The bank also declared a P1 special dividend to stockholders during the meeting.

He added that while interest income could increase because of higher interest rates, this might be offset by the imposition of the value-added tax on banks.

The bank is banking on consumer lending to contribute to the growth this year as corporate lending remained weak. "We're hoping the corporate will come back to the well," Loinaz said.

BPI senior executive vice president Aurelio Montinola III told reporters that consumer loans in the first quarter grew 10 percent to 15 percent.

BPI, owned by conglomerate Ayala Corp. and Singapore's DBS Bank, posted a consolidated net income of P5.17 billion last year, slightly down from P5.25 billion in 2001.

Loinaz said the bank was likely to post flat earnings in the first quarter of this year. It had a net income of P1.48 billion in January to March 2002.

"The business for the last three months has not been all that exciting, it's kind of flat," he said. "We're talking about loans, we're talking about earnings. We haven't seen any major pick-up in business."

BPI said it was likely to set aside P1.2 billion in loan-loss provisions this year, about the same amount as in 2002.

Loinaz said BPI set up a pool of foreclosed assets worth P4.5 billion to P5 billion in book value, which it had offered to sell to three big foreign institutions. He said a deal to sell the assets was likely to be signed within two months.

"This is what we are offering to a number of players, very large players that I cannot mention," Loinaz said. "We're putting this through a bidding process."

The assets, mostly located in Manila and Cebu, are part of P15 billion of foreclosed properties the bank had said it planned to unload.

BPI's bad loan ratio stood at 11.9 percent at the end of 2002, lower than the industry average of 15.76 percent.

Loinaz said the bank's plan to expand in Southeast Asia was "on hold" due to global uncertainties related to the war in Iraq.

"That's still up in the air. We haven't sorted out much of that yet," he said. "I guess we just have to wait for the Middle East situation to sort itself out."

BPI had said it was looking at possible investments in the region and was interested in buying a stake in Indonesia's PT Bank NISP. With a report from Reuters

LSC obtains P100-M loan to buy vessel

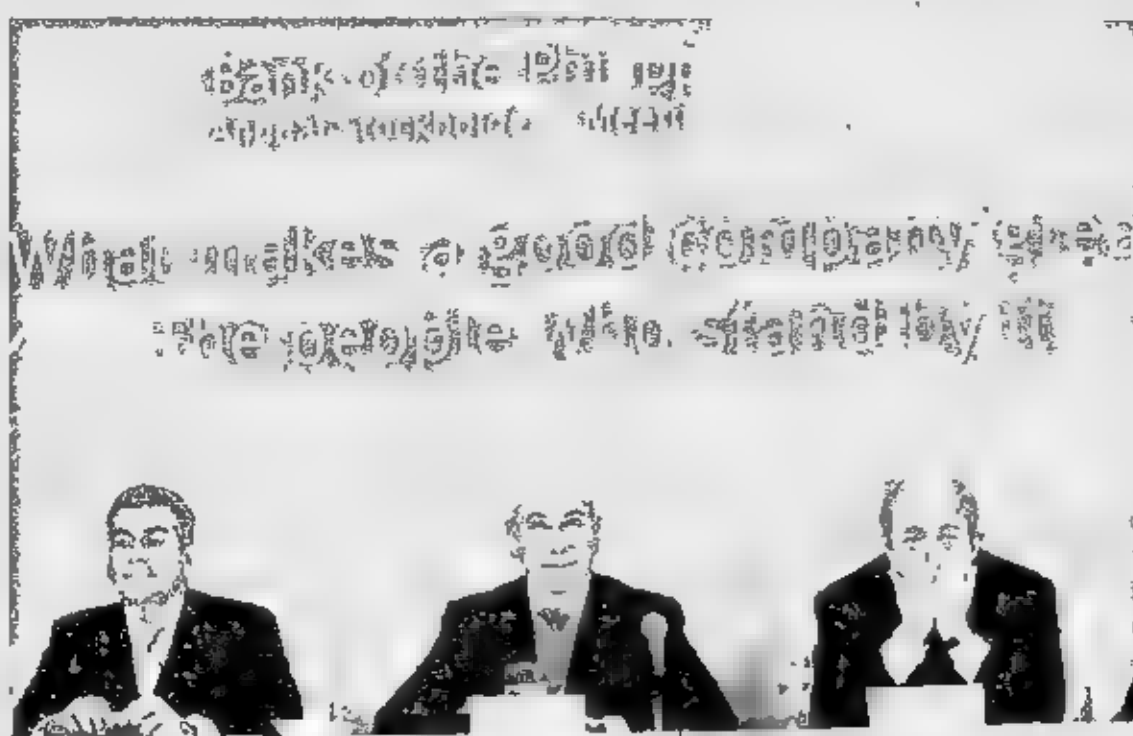

BINONDO-based Lorenzo Shipping Corp. has secured a fresh loan of P100 million from Metropolitan Bank and Trust Co. to buy a new vessel.

In a disclosure to the Philippine Stock Exchange yesterday, LSC spokesperson Arsenio Cabrera Jr. said the shipping firm had executed an agreement to buy the MV Lorcon Davao from Milky Way Shipping Inc.

LSC and Milky Way had an earlier deal wherein the former was given the option to purchase the vessel.

The option was exercised by LSC at the purchase price of $152 million, which will be funded by the Metrobank loan.

LSC embarked on a streamlining program in the aftermath of the currency crisis. Doris C. Dumlaog

'NO QUORUM, NO ELECTION'Boycott dampens PSE meeting

By Doris C. Dumlaog and Elena Torrijos

THERE may be only one slate running unopposed in tomorrow's controversial Philippine Stock Exchange elections, but the opposition's boycott may cloud that group's ability to bring majority of the members to the meeting.

"No quorum, no election," said Jose Aquino, Securities and Exchange Commission director and chair of the PSE's nomination and election committee (Nomelec).

If there would be not enough shareholders represented to satisfy a quorum, Aquino said the PSE would have to schedule another meeting and that a holdover of the incumbent 15-member board was inevitable.

A quorum is defined by the PSE by-laws as having 50 percent plus one of the 9.2 million issued shares being represented during the annual stockholders' meeting.

"A very close call," opposition standard-bearer Plomeno Francisco said yesterday when asked whether his group expected a quorum, which could mean a poll victory for the rival group.

"But I think they may just barely make a quorum," he admitted.

Francisco (who is backed by former PSE chairs Robert Coyiuto Jr., Trina Kalaw and Harry Liu) was supposed to run for PSE chair against presidential sister-in-law Alicia Rita Arroyo (who is backed by incumbent chair Vivian Yuchengco), but his slate withdrew from the elections, citing alleged "unfair" treatment from the Nomelec.

William Ang, a broker-candidate running under the Arroyo ticket, yesterday said his group was not sure whether there would be a quorum on Saturday.

The main issue dividing the bourse had been the short-listing of non-broker directors by the Nomelec.

It may make the PSE meeting tomorrow the most controversial in the local bourse's history, even exceeding last year's standoff between Coyiuto and Yuchengco. In last year's election, Yuchengco, supported by Nomelec-appointed independent directors, was elected chair despite Coyiuto winning the votes of a majority of the brokers. This led Coyiuto to spearhead the drive against short-listing for this year's board elections.

During the nomination proceedings for this year's election of independent directors, the 5-member Nomelec invoked SEC Circular No. 16 to short-list independent director candidates. The Nomelec, headed by the SEC's Aquino and supported by Yuchengco allies Antonio Lope and Francisco Villaroman, appointed incumbent directors Tomas Apacible, Cayetano Paderanga, Ernest Leung and Fr.

Joaquin Bernas.

But Bernas later declined the appointment. "I could not honorably accept being a beneficiary of a process I had consistently opposed."

Former SEC Chair Rosario Lopez also supported the view of Bernas. "As former chair of the SEC I was constrained to comment on the PSE short-listing which is of vital importance in the Philippine capital market. First and foremost, I believe that the provision on short-listing is nowhere to be found in the Corporation Code of the Philippines which provides in an explicit manner for the conduct of election of the board of directors of any corporation including the Philippine Stock Exchange."

Three former PSE chairpersons—Harry Liu, Trinidad Kalaw and Felipe Yap—have openly expressed opposition to short-listing.

But Ang also issued yesterday a statement refuting the opposition's complaint on the selection of non-broker directors, the nomination of former banker Peter Pavila and the time constraint on the gathering of proxies.

Ang stressed that the PSE by-laws gave the Nomelec the responsibility of making the choice of all non-broker nominations and that the decision to short-list candidates was lawful. "It is absurd to claim that the stockholders who approved the by-laws gave Nomelec this responsibility without giving it the power and authority to do its job."

Dollar loans down 12% in 2002 on weak peso

By Clarissa S. Batino

WITH borrowers avoiding dollar-denominated loans because of the peso's weakness, lending from the foreign currency deposit units of banks dropped 12 percent to $4.903 billion last year.

Data from the Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas showed that compared to the third quarter, however, FCDU loans went up by $4.4 million, or 0.1 percent, in the fourth quarter.

Even as FCDU deposits remained steady at $12 billion to $13 billion dollar lending contracted significantly in more than five years.

BSP Deputy Governor Amando Tetangco Jr. said FCDU loans had been steadily declining over the last five years, as local borrowers turned away from dollar-denominated loans to minimize risks and take advantage of declining interest rates.

Dollar loans peaked at $11.9 billion in the second quarter of 1997. As the effects of the Asian financial crisis took its toll on the peso-dollar exchange rate, however, dollar loans dropped to $7.9 billion in 1998 and again to $7.29 billion in 1999.

By 2000, loans from the dollar-denominated units of banks had shrunk to $6.2 billion and then to $5.5 billion in 2001.

Dollar deposits, however, have remained largely stable from $14.5 billion in 1997 to $13 billion in recent weeks.

In comparison, peso loans of commercial banks posted increases from both the previous quarter and the previous year by 1.2 percent and 4.8 percent, according to Tetangco.

"Borrowers continued to have an aversion towards foreign exchange risk that is inherent in foreign currency loans. It helped that interest rates on peso loans carried an average of 8.1 percent and a high average of 10 percent in December 2002," he said.

Tetangco said the private sector accounted for $3.745 billion, or 76.4 percent, of outstanding FCDU credits, the maturity of which was evenly split between medium and long term. The public sector took up the remaining 23.6 percent.

Dollar loans to residents stood at 96.8 percent of the portfolio and exporters continued to hug the biggest chunk at 26.3 percent of the total followed by public utilities with 22.8 percent.

Entrepreneurship offers hope for new grads

By Ian Jester de Vera Contributor

NOT too long ago it was advisable for parents to respect their children's choice of what college course they intended to take or even their decision to shift from one course to another.

"Kung saan ka masaya, te, suportahan ta ka," says the distinctive expression from the famous TV commercial.

That was a liberal approach in parenting that encouraged children to discover and explore their own potentials, skills and interests.

But this approach, as statistics would show, only resulted in disastrous effects in the national workforce: there was a disproportion between the number of available jobs and the number of graduates fit for those jobs.

Thus, there are more newly licensed doctors, lawyers, teachers, and engineers than jobs waiting for them.

Reality bites and truth hurts even more. Of the 759,000 new jobs created every year, only 51,000 are professional and executive positions. That is far from the 400,000 who graduate from college every year. And because of the global downturn worsened by the September 11 incident in New York, many companies, even major multinational firms and global giants, are downsizing and have frozen hiring.

As a result of the mismatch between supply and demand in the college-level job market, college graduates are forced to work at pay levels below what is expected for those who have undergone higher education.

They then find themselves in a situation where they want additional work because they lack income or they believe their potentials are not being maximized.

In search of greener pastures, they often see working abroad as the end-all and be-all although this will necessarily entail being separated from their loved ones and the uncertainty that hounds living (and working) in an unfamiliar territory.

Few options

If indeed our fresh graduates would still try their luck here in the Philippines, they would most likely find themselves trapped with only a few options to choose from.

Top on the list of the most probable jobs they would get this summer is that of a call center representative, whose minimum qualifications are completion of a four-year college course and English proficiency.

There are many variations in the job title but the common denominator is attending to outbound calls from abroad. Some do not like working in the wee hours of the morning but if you are just new in this job you are destined, as your baptism of fire, to work in the graveyard shift, even on Sundays and holidays, since the clientele is mostly American and thus in different time zones.

Others complain about the monotonous aspect of the job because you have to sit down and attend to telephone calls for eight hours a day and sometimes even

Other jobs in the list are those in sales and marketing, logistics and distribution, education both local and abroad, and microfinance in the rural areas. But certainly, not all our fresh graduates are qualified for these jobs, which may not even be their cup of tea in the first place.

Once employed they cannot be assured of security either. Corporate mergers and layoffs have made the worker dispensable for the sake of the best interest (call it survival) of the company.

Creating options

Is there a silver lining amid this gloom?

Hope can only be found by the independent, the risk taker and the undaunted, qualities that are characteristic of an entrepreneur.

Entrepreneurship can impart on our fresh graduates the experience, skills and competencies that are not taught in any college or university but can give them an edge over other graduates competing for positions in other companies.

This preoccupation can also give them "lead-time" while they wait for the dream job, and once they find themselves successful in their businesses, they might even abandon job-hunting completely and instead venture into self-employment for life.

And from a patriotic point of view, entrepreneurship can create new jobs for the millions of unemployed because of the economic crunch.

The fresh graduate, however, must not fall into the trap set by the misconception that entrepreneurship is all joy because of the carefree characteristic of being "your own boss".

Entrepreneurship, as even the most successful of entrepreneurs would agree, has its own difficulties, too.

For every reward entrepreneurship brings comes a corresponding risk the entrepreneur has to take, and the risk becomes more burdensome since he or she has to bear it alone.

Globalization, for instance, has made business evolution too fast and too furious, and it has claimed numerous casualties in the form of businesses that have closed shop.

If our fresh graduates who decide to embark on entrepreneurship will be caught off guard by this phenomenon, they will soon realize that they have only come out of the frying pan and into the fire.

Sustainability

Sustainability is a feature our fresh graduates must acquire if they really want to succeed in entrepreneurship. It characterizes successful enterprises and it is also the trait that differentiates an entrepreneur from the ordinary businessperson.

It gives the "staying power" that endures crises and survives dog-eat-dog competition. But as our fresh graduates and new entrepreneurs will eventually learn, sustainability is easier said than done. They will realize that they, too, have some work to do.

How can one achieve staying power in business? Perhaps it is a topic for another article. It is the same as asking, how can one succeed in business? At the moment it is enough that the fresh graduate is exposed to all courses of action he or she may take after graduation, and entrepreneurship is a good alternative.

This is the age of entrepreneurship as there are not enough jobs these days. Not everyone can be part of the working class, but everyone can become an entrepreneur.

(The University of the Philippines Institute for Small-Scale Industries is offering for a limited engagement a special run of the Appreciation Course on Entrepreneurship on April 8, 2003. For more information, call Tess Santos at 9266316 or 9287076 to 79 local 165.)

Family fights to save vanishing salt trade

By Ma. Diosa Labiste
PDI Visayas Bureau

HOSKYN, Guimaras—From the flotsam and jetsam across the strait, a family finds a source of livelihood in what is now a vanishing trade in Guimaras—salt making.

Serafin, 58, and his wife Emma Ganila transform the garbage floating ashore into "toltol" rock salt, which is a rare find in the market these days.

Toltol is so named because of how it is used traditionally. In an absence of a viand, the salt slab is broken into fist-sized pieces and dabbed on steaming hot rice dribbled with lard or oil. The result is a feast of glistering rice perked with the flavors of the sea.

The salt slab is also used as a condiment for cooking and a lick for the cattle in the rural areas. Unlike the coarse table salt, rock salt has a longer shelf life and does not melt easily.

Toltol making is a tedious process and not for the fainthearted, said Serafin who has been making toltol for at least 30 years.

During the months of October to May, when the winds brought by the Northeast Monsoon sweep all sorts of debris to the shores of Hoskyn, Serafin carefully gathers those which he could use in making toltol—ngbao reeds, bamboo tubes, coconut and nipa fronds, twigs and tree branches.

About 20 years ago, gathering them was much easier because he did not have a hard time separating them from plastic and foil packaging.

Serafin then makes a bonfire out his find and sets aside the ashes. The ash is then placed on a sieve or cheesecloth.

A few scoops of clear seawater is slowly poured on it. The process is repeated several times until the strained water comes out crystal clear. After adding a tablespoon of coconut milk, the water is cooked in huge vats for a day until it hardens into an ash-colored slab of salt. A 10 x 14 x 3 slab of toltol is sold at P250.

"It is selling like hotcakes in Iloilo City and as far as Dumangas town north of Iloilo. The Chinese in the city are our regular customers because they believe the salt is a cure for some ailments," said Serafin.

Doctors in Iloilo, who bought Serafin's toltol, reportedly had it tested in laboratories and found it safe for consumption.

His wife Emma sometimes brings some salt slabs to Bacolod City, Negros Occidental where she has regular customers. Filipino expatriates would often buy toltol for its taste and the memories it evoked.

Celia Herrera, barangay chief of Hoskyn, said her community was once a haven of toltol makers but many families abandoned the trade because younger people were leaving home to look for jobs elsewhere.

Serafin, however, keeps faith in his trade because it is a family tradition. He also boasts of being the best maker of toltol in Guimaras and, probably, the whole world. For him, it is a matter of pride.

Serafin and Emma have eight children and six grandchildren. From their earnings in making toltol, they have been able to send their children to school. But none of their children plans to continue their trade.

"It is a dying trade. I hope young people would be interested to learn the craft which brings fame to Hoskyn," said Herrera.

Inter-corporate loans and advances

By Casey M. Barleta
SGV & Co.

HAVE you ever extended a loan to a relative?

It happens every now and then—a close relative or a friend would approach you for assistance to tide him over in times of financial crisis.

Most pay. Some don't. And for those who do, they pay only the principal, without interest.

In the first place, we do not usually charge interest on loans to friends and relatives.

It doesn't seem proper, right? To take advantage of one's problems for your own benefit just does not sit well with the Filipino character.

Interest-free loans

The concept of interest-free loans has been recognized even by our Civil Code.

Thus, under the Civil Code, where the parties to a contract of loan did not specify interest payments, then no interest will be charged. (Article 1956, Civil Code of the Philippines.)

On the other hand, if interest has been stipulated, but no rate was specified, then the legal rate of interest shall be applied.

In the case of loans, the applicable interest rate is 12 percent (Reformina vs. Tomol, 139 SCRA 260; Central Bank Circular 416; Eastern Shipping Lines vs. Hon. Court of Appeals and Mercantile Insurance Company, Inc., G.R. No. 97412, July 12, 1994.)

But the Bureau of Internal Revenue has not actually imposed this rate, preferring as it does to follow the bank reference rate prescribed by the Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas. (RMO 63-99)

That seems to be clear enough up to this point.

But what most people do not know is that under our Tax Code, the Commissioner of Internal Revenue may allocate income and deductions between related taxpayers to arrive at the proper tax payable. (Section 50, 1997 Tax Code)

Charging of interest

This power of the BIR Commissioner has been interpreted by the Court of Tax Appeals, in a case decided last September, 2002 to include the charging of interest on loans where there are no stipulations as to payment of interest.

The rationale for this is to put a controlled taxpayer on an equal footing with an uncontrolled taxpayer.

In other words, where corporations controlled by the same interests may be able to play around with their income and deductions—for example, a company subject to a higher tax may be able to shift income to an affiliate subject to a lower tax rate, thus effectively saving on the amount of tax payable—a company without affiliates cannot.

Thus would be true even if the parties are taxable at the same rate, because one might have a lower tax base than the other.

A company with subsidiaries, or is otherwise a member of a group of companies, would therefore have a tax advantage over a company standing alone.

In the case of interests on loans, if an interest-free loan is given by one company to a related company, the creditor company would not have any interest income that would be subject to income tax.

On the other hand, if the creditor is a non-related company, interest would normally be charged, and such interest would be subject to income tax.

Interest expenses

Thus, by empowering the BIR Commissioner to charge interest on interest-free loans or advances, the government is not deprived of much-needed revenue, as such interest income may then be subjected to tax.

A debtor-corporation is also allowed to adjust its income to reflect the corresponding interest expense.

This pronouncement of the Court of Tax Appeals appears to be all-encompassing compared to the BIR's own regulations on the matter.

Under Revenue Memorandum Order No. 63-99, while the BIR Commissioner may charge interest on interest-free loans/advances between related companies, the rate will not apply if the loan is in fact a contribution to capital.

Inter-corporate loans or advances are considered contributions to capital under the following circumstances:

a) the loan is made by a company which is a corporate shareholder of the borrowing company;

b) the loan is based on the percentage of shareholdings of the corporate shareholder making the advances;

c) the advances are made because of the financial need of the borrowing company, taking into consideration the financial ability of the lending company, which makes it clear that the advances are emergency loans to help a related company short of capital. (BIR Ruling 191-99, December 3, 1999)

Arm's length interest

In those instances where interest may be charged, an arm's length interest rate should be applied i.e., the same rate that would have been charged to an unrelated company.

In determining the arm's length rate, the interest to be used is the bank reference rate prescribed by the Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas. (Section 4.2, RMO 63-99)

Can we then say that this BIR interpretation is now modified by the pronouncement of the Court of Tax Appeals?

How can the BIR regulation, as well as the tax court's pronouncement, be harmonized with the Civil Code on the charging of interest?

If I were a businessman, I would naturally seek shelter under the Civil Code as it prevents the BIR from assessing a deficiency income tax arising from the charging of interest on a loan made to a related company.

Dilemma

But would the Civil Code take precedence in this situation?

Can we say that when it comes to taxation, the Tax Code, as interpreted by the Court of Tax Appeals and the BIR, should take precedence over the Civil Code provision, because the Civil Code is a law of general application, while the Tax Code is a law of special application?

It is a basic principle in law that a special law has precedence over a general law.

But let's say that the decision of the Court of Tax Appeals has been appealed to the Court of Appeals. Thus, it is not yet a case law.

Hence, the interpretation of the Commissioner's power to impute interest would at best be only argumentative, although one that carries weight, being a pronouncement by a court whose primary responsibility is to rule on tax issues.

Waiting for Supreme Court

We might have to wait for the Supreme Court to resolve this matter before we could know the proper treatment of inter-company loans and advances.

In the meantime, it would be prudent to charge interest, even at the prevailing bank rates of from 8 percent to 10 percent per annum.

At least we minimize our deficiency tax in case of an assessment. Anyway, for loans between related parties, it would just be like transferring funds from the left to the right pocket.

But I can be more aggressive: I'd say I fall under the exceptions mentioned in RMO 63-99, for what else is the purpose of a loan between affiliates other than for use as operating capital?

Any other use of that loan by the company cannot at all be justified as business-related and, accordingly, may be charged interest under the regulations.

Ad firm honors best work

FOR 15 years, the DDB Pinnacle Awards have recognized and honored the best work from its more than 200 offices around the world, focusing on its creative product and reminding them that creativity is its heritage and mission.

A special award, plus a cash prize of $10,000, is given to a campaign that best exemplifies one or more of the principles of its founder Bill Bernbach. This highest honor is chosen by the chairman of the network, Keith Reinhard, from among the Pinnacle gold winners.

Another award is the Chairman Award, also selected by Reinhard and given to the most creative multi-media campaign.

This year, the "Real Men of Genius" campaign for Bud Light won the Radio Mercury Awards Grand prize for two years in a row, along with nearly every other creative award. Two elements really make the campaign work—the over-the-top, bombastic tone of a clueless announcer, spoofing an 80's style of advertising, and the rock singer who belts out phrases.

All in all, the DDB Chicago team has produced 60 of these outrageous radio salutes, so popular with listeners they are being traded on-line in Bud Light fan sites.

This year's Chairman Award went to Downtown Partners in Toronto, a division of DDB Group Canada, for their hilarious and highly effective "Bud Light Institute" campaign.

This year the Pinnacle jury gathered in New York, where a week was spent reviewing over 1,700 entries from 87 offices around the world.

SPI buys US medical firm

By Doris C. Dumiao

TECHNOLOGY firm SPI Technologies Inc. has acquired the assets of Tennessee-based medical transcription company Med-Type LLC.

In a disclosure yesterday, SPI said it acquired Med-Type with the help of its Delaware-based subsidiary, SPI Healthcare Documentation LLC.

The company said the acquisition was in line with its strategy to acquire US companies that could help boost its business volumes.

SPI chief finance officer Francisco Suarez Jr. told the Philippine Stock Exchange the agreement involved the purchase by SPI of Med-Type's assets and existing contracts worth about $475,000 (over P25 million).

Med-Type is a privately held medical transcription company providing services to companies in northeastern and southeastern United States. It specializes in medical transcription services for hospitals, clinics and group practices.

Located in Nashville, Tennessee, Med-Type has 125 transcribers in its pool, with an average eight years working experience covering all medical specialties.

BPI insurance units post profits; pre-need slumps

BANK of the Philippine Islands' insurance units chalked up profits last year, but its pre-need arm registered a significant loss.

"We believe our insurance subsidiaries will be showing better results in the next two years," BPI president Xavier Loinaz told the bank's shareholders yesterday.

Loinaz said the bank would tap bancassurance—cross-selling of insurance products through a bank's network—to improve its insurance units' performance.

Ayala Plans Inc. suffered a net loss of P285 million because the bank decided to boost the pre-need firm's ability to service its planholders.

In line with this, Ayala Plans set aside P575 million to build up its actuarial reserves to P1.3 billion.

Ayala Life Assurance Inc., meanwhile, posted a 72-percent increase in profit to P176 million on cost-cutting in view of flat business.

BPI/MS Insurance Corp. recorded a 12-percent profit decline to P126 million.

Universal Reinsurance Corp. brought up its earnings last year to P70 million or 40 percent higher than the previous year.

Loinaz disclosed that BPI was currently seeking approval from the Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas to enter into bancassurance. Elena R. Torrijos

First Metro named best domestic investment bank

FIRST Metro Investment Corp., investment banking arm of the Metrobank group, has been named the "Best Domestic Investment Bank" in the Philippines by The Asset, Asia's leading finance magazine for corporations and institutional investors.

First Metro was selected by The Asset based on deals it executed over the past year, innovations introduced to clients during the year, league-table standing, estimated market share relative to competition for various products and client testimonials.

Last year, the total capital raised by First Metro was P82 billion. This was nearly double the P43 billion it raised in 2001.

The company, issue managed, along with Land Bank of the Philippines and Development Bank of the Philippines, a landmark P62.9-billion retail treasury bond issue in June 2002. This was the largest fund-raising exercise by the Philippine government and the single largest financial transaction in the country ever.

First Metro also lead managed an innovative zero-coupon bond deal for the Home Guarantee Corp., a government financial institution created to provide financing for home building and improvements under a system in which the lending institution is insured against loss of its capital.

The five-year offering raised P7 billion for HGC, which was able to tap private money to jump-start its housing program.

Nationwide search for Judy Ann's partner

NEW movie outfit JMCN is all out to launch its second presentation after the ambitious initial production, "Batang West-Side," which garnered several international acclaims in film festivals abroad.

For its second venture, JMCN will do a Judy Ann Santos starrer, to be filmed in Venice, Paris and the Philippines.

Joey Gosiengfiao returns to the director's chair and works at the helm of the movie. Gosiengfiao's last directorial assignment was "Nights of Serafina," shown in 1996.

JMCN will conduct a nationwide search for Judy Ann's new male lead in the key cities of the country, particularly in provincial campuses and organizations.

Interested parties may call JMCN office 812-7978 or send close up photos and bio-data to Unit A-11 Mirasol Townhomes, Mirasol St., near 15th avenue, Cubao, Quezon City.

The chosen male lead will be signed up to a three-year contract with the studio.

Leaders running out of tools to jumpstart global economy

WASHINGTON—Economic policymakers around the world are running out of tools to boost the flagging global economy, the World Bank said in a report on Wednesday.

The bank said the US Federal Reserve, the world's most influential central bank, has little room left to cut interest rates and expects the Fed to leave them on hold this year if growth picks up slightly as expected.

"A worrisome characteristic of the current economic environment is that macroeconomic policies may be running up against their limits," said the bank's 2003 Global Development Finance report.

In fact, policies this year and next are more likely to be less stimulative or "restrictive" than expansive, the bank concludes.

The report comes a day after the Institute of International Finance, a leading financial lobbying group, said the global economy is facing serious problems that will require a coordinated effort from rich nations to bolster prospects.

The Iraq war is a major risk to the outlook and could knock off $75 billion to $100 billion from global economic growth in the first half of the year, the bank said.

But without the war, the world economy is still in a soft spot.

"We've been constantly cutting our growth forecasts over the last year," Philip Suttle, lead author of the report, said at a press briefing.

"Particularly important, is that regardless of the war, general confidence just keeps slipping."

A WOMAN talks over her phone as she passes by a share prices chart in downtown Tokyo. The Nikkei-225 average of the Tokyo Stock Exchange fell 52.10 points to close at 8,017.75 points.

The bank has not made any estimates for the impact of the outbreak of the deadly Severe Acute Respiratory Syndrome (SARS) on economy.

East Asia, the fastest growing region of the world, has so far been the hardest hit by the disease. Suttle said SARS is "an unambiguous negative to growth."

HK shuns karaoke, shopping on SARS

HONG KONG—It's 10 p.m. and one of Hong Kong's biggest karaoke parlors is nearly empty. Hallways that would ordinarily be full of smoke from cigarettes smell more like a hospital.

The normally bustling territory, one of the most densely populated places on Earth, seems more like a ghost town these days as residents avoid crowds for fear of catching a deadly virus that has killed nearly 80 people worldwide and infected over 2,300 others.

The mood grew even grimmer after the World Health Organization warned travelers on Wednesday to avoid Hong Kong and China's southern Guangdong province because of the spreading health threat, the first such warning the UN body has ever issued.

"Business has dropped more than 40 percent since the outbreak of atypical pneumonia two weeks ago," said Raymond Man, marketing manager at California Red, as he gestured around an empty karaoke room that accommodates more than 20 people.

The outbreak of Severe Acute Respiratory Syndrome (SARS) is proving devastating to Hong Kong's restaurants and retailers, and its collective psyche.

Ordinarily sociable Hong Kongers, whose favorite pastimes include shopping, movies, dining out and karaoke, are staying at home. The virus is believed to be spread by droplets.

Schools have been closed and more than 200 people believed to have contracted the virus have been moved to isolation camps.

Despite spending HK$1 million ($128,200) to disinfect karaoke parlors, buy paper caps for microphones and assuring crooners that singing is safe, California Red has temporarily closed three of its 12 outlets due to low attendance. Reuters

US economy faces uncertainty, Fed says

CHICAGO—Chicago Federal Reserve Bank president Michael Moskow said on Wednesday the US economy faces great uncertainty, but monetary policy is still supporting growth.

"We're in a sluggish period, primarily starting in February, continuing in March, and a lot of us think it's because of the geopolitical situation," Moskow said in response to a question after a speech on corporate governance at Loyola University.

"There's an enormous amount of uncertainty," he added.

The Federal Reserve has used the phrase "geopolitical uncertainty" to refer to the war with Iraq, and has blamed that uncertainty for most of the recent weakness in the economy.

Officials have said it will take time to gain a clearer picture of the underlying pace of growth.

Moskow, a voting member of the Fed's policy committee, said it was hard to tell how much of the weakness was due to the war and how much to other factors.

"We certainly know that geopolitical uncertainty is having some effect on consumers and business firms at this point, but no one knows for the sure the extent of that impact," he told reporters.

He added that policy is "accommodative," meaning that already low official interest rates are supporting the economy.

The federal funds rate stands at 1.25 percent.

Federal Reserve policymakers in the past week have suggested they would like to wait for more economic data to gauge the underlying strength of the economy, despite a flood of weak economic reports in the past month.

But many economists expect it will cut interest rates again in coming months. The Fed's next policy meeting is on May 6.

Moskow held out the possibility of an eventual pick-up in the economy, saying "a lot of ingredients are in place" for an improvement later this year.

Earlier, in his speech, the central banker noted the US economy has proved itself resilient on many occasions. Reuters

WTO, envoys seek to get pact talks on track

GENEVA—Leading officials involved in troubled global trade talks said on Wednesday progress toward a new international pact could help ease any economic fall-out from the US-led war in Iraq.

World Trade Organization (WTO) chief Supachai Panitchpakdi and officials from rich and poorer countries agreed extra efforts were vital to get negotiations back on track and secure a deal on schedule by the end of next year.

"At a time of growing global economic uncertainty, progress in the Doha Round toward its timely conclusion can make a much needed contribution to confidence," Supachai said at a key review session on the negotiations.

The Doha Road talks, named after Qatar's capital where they were launched in November 2001, struck a major hitch this week over the pivotal and highly political issue of agricultural reform.

Chief US negotiator Peter Allgeier told reporters a tense international situation, in which Iraq was "only one element," should make success in the Round "more important to people."

Argentina's chief trade negotiator, Martin P. Redrado, said the war, which has sparked a surge of anti-US sentiment around the globe and made markets jittery, should not be allowed to derail the Round.

"No one wants to see this Round, or this multilateral institution (the WTO) fail," Redrado said in an interview.

"Because of the seriousness of the (international) situation, we need to make this work one way or another."

The farm talks started in early 2001 long before the Round got under way, but their failure to meet a March 31 deadline for an outline accord on how to reduce agricultural subsidies and lower tariffs for farm produce has cast a dark cloud. Reuters

SARS worse for airlines than Iraq-KLM

AMSTERDAM, Netherlands—The chief executive of Dutch airline KLM, which unveiled drastic cost cuts on Tuesday amid falling bookings, said on Wednesday the deadly SARS virus was worse for business than the Iraq war.

Leo van Wijk said the drop in bookings for flights to Asia was "really dramatic" and added overall March traffic was down about 9 percent on the previous year. The official March traffic figures are due on Thursday.

"Across the board SARS has made a lot of people scared to fly, especially to Asia. Its impact is much bigger than the war in Iraq," the head of Europe's No. 4 airline said.

The Severe Acute Respiratory Syndrome, which is spreading in Asia, has already killed nearly 80 people worldwide while 2,300 people have been infected.

Van Wijk told journalists that KLM expected savings of 500 to 600 million euros ($540-$648 million) annually from a restructuring plan that would shave as much as a tenth of the staff of over 30,000.

AN AIRPORT staff and nurses in protective suit wait for passengers arriving from Hong Kong at the Changi International Airport of Singapore. Asian economies are being ravaged by a killer pneumonia virus, with growth rates likely to be slashed by as much as 1.5 percent points this year.

These savings would come into full effect in two or three years' time, he said.

KLM shares closed up 12.8 percent, doubling earlier gains on news of the amount of expected cost savings and more alliance talks. The stock is still down over a third this year.

"For investors, KLM has given just the right signal. It is preparing for a merger and now it is going to doll itself up to be a beautiful bride," asset manager Bart Groot at Bank Nacheus said.

Asked about its ongoing alliance talks, Van Wijk reiterated that a decision would be taken before the end of the year but added a number of regulatory is-ssues remained to be resolved.

He said that British Airways Plc, a leading partner of the oneworld alliance, would still want a full merger with KLM but regulators would not allow that.

"BA doesn't want a decision (about alliances) at this time."

They want a merger... but that can only get approval if they give up free skies to the US, which they are not prepared to do," he said.

Another possible partner is Air France and its SkyTeam grouping. "Whether we will decide in June, September or November will depend on what the regulators will decide," British Airways said KLM would be welcome in oneworld and confirmed a merger was not in the cards.

In Paris, Air France said discussions with KLM were continuing but nothing had yet been decided.

KLM has for some time been in separate talks with its two larger rivals about potential partnerships, and speculation has bubbled lately that a deal could be imminent. Reuters

Angono Band releases San Pedro marches in new music album

IN OBSERVANCE of the first death anniversary of National Artist for Music Maestro Lucio San Pedro on March 31, the Angono National Symphonic Band (ANSB) releases his popular marches in a music album, "Jubilate."

The album includes the "Festival March" (1940), the "Makisig at Mabikas March" (1940), "Victory or Parade March" (1942), "Bintang Bukid March" (1945) and "Jubilate March Heroic" (1970), whose orchestral version is played by the Philippine Philharmonic Orchestra in state functions.

Among the more recent compositions include the Centennial March which was commissioned by the Cultural Center of the Philippines (CCP) in 1998 in celebration of the centennial of Philippine Independence and "The President March," commissioned in 1992 by the Malacañang for then President Fidel Ramos.

The Band, founded and conducted by Maestro San Pedro himself, is the only band in the country to win championships in two national music competitions—the National Band Contest in 1960 and the San Miguel Corporation's "Balik Banda" contest in 1979.

The band has performed in prestigious concert halls around the country.

In 1997, the Band was featured in a special concert in Hong Kong at the International Convention Center.

Music aficionados describe ANSB as a "band which sounds like a symphony orchestra."

The Band is headed by Prof. Manuel San Pedro Bautista Sr. as principal conductor. Prof. Agripino "Nonoy" Diestro as resident conductor and Cris Cedric Gabrie. Rojas as associate conductor.

"Jubilate" is available in CDs and cassettes.

For inquiries, call the ANSB at 651-0528 or the CCP Gift Shop at 832-1125.

Viva introduces young balladeer

PILITA Corrales and Viva's Vic del Rosario—the same team that discovered the likes of Martin Nievera, Jaya and Gary Valenciano—brings another promising balladeer to the local music scene.

The new talent is Dexter, a Filipino singer raised in Australia, who recently launched his debut album, "Puso sa Puso," under Viva Records.

With a diploma in contemporary music and winner of Australia's FBC best male performer award in 2000, Dexter was part of the West End cast of "Miss Saigon" from 1998 to 1999. He also joined the musical's Australian production at Sydney's Capitol Theater.

Dexter started performing at an early age in school variety shows and rock bands. He graduated to solo singing for the Filipino-Australian community. He has also supported and participated in various shows for charities like WestEnd Cares for AIDS Awareness and Greenpeace.

Dexter's album was co-produced by Vic and Vincent del Rosario, with multi-awarded Margot Gallardo as executive producer and Civ Fontanilla as album coordinator.

Other collaborators on the album were Moy Ortiz of The Company, who did the design concept and art direction, Ronnie Savacion for photography, Jing Monis and Juan Sarte of Propaganda for hair and makeup.

"Puso sa Puso" contains 14 cuts, bannered by the carrier single, "Bakit Nga Ba Hindi," a duet with Bituin Escobarte. The song is composed by Moy Ortiz and Edith Gallardo.

Moy and Edith also collaborated on six other cuts: the title track "Puso sa Puso," "Nawala ang Puso Ko," "Pa'no Nangyari," "Yon," "Laging Nagmamahal," "Wag Kang Mag-iba" and "Nasa Iyo Na."

With Babsie Molina, Gallardo wrote "Alam Kong Alam Mo," "Ikaw Lamang Pa'na" and "They Know It's Over."

With Andre Castillo, Gallardo composed "Higit sa Lahat" and "Ayokong Magtanong."

The CD also contains "One By One," arranged by Marc Lopez and a revival of the "Chicago" hit "Happy Man," arranged by Mon Esplana.

YOU BORN TODAY: You are successful in large measure due to your tenacity and hard work. You're confident, composed and professional. You want to make a lifelong commitment to something. You will not compromise your beliefs. Money is not your motivating factor in life. Major changes take place for you this coming year.

Birthdate of: Bette Davis, actress; Gregory Peck, actor; Colin Powell, Secretary of State

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Trust the money-making ideas that occur to you in the next three or four weeks. Some of them might be worth serious consideration. (You're very good at nailing new things.)

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20): Working alone will please you now and in the months ahead. You need time by yourself to sort things out and get things done.

LEO (July 23 to Aug. 22): Discussions with a female boss, a mother or maternal figure are likely today. In turn, you might play this role to someone else. Look for ways to help someone.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Starting today and for the next few weeks, you will feel a strong desire to communicate to others. You have something to say, and you want to say it. So say it.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22): You're high-visibility now because the limelight is on you. Today, a female friend can be particularly helpful to you. Be open to this opportunity.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 to Sept. 22): Start to voice out loud what your dreams and hopes for the future are. When you do this with others, it registers in your mind in a stronger way. (Then you are more likely to achieve these dreams.)

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): Research into how to do something with respect to a mortgage, shared possessions or commonly held property gives you good answers now.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): Discussions with close friends and partners become deeper, more important and full of more mutual understanding. This is good. Life is always easier when you get along with those who are close to you.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): You find it easy to do the homework or missionary work that you need to do in order to get the job done. You're willing to look for answers, plow through details and study what you need to know.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 19): Because of your conservative cover and solid values, few know how playful and prankish you are at times. Often the most bizarre things occur to you. Expect an interesting month ahead!

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 to Feb. 18): Family discussions during the next month become more important. People are ready to help each other now (with lots of talk).

PISCES (Feb. 19 to March 20): Talk to siblings, relatives and neighbors today and in the next few weeks. Lots of information can be shared among you.

BIR, Customs still most corrupt, survey shows

By Clarissa S. Batino

THE BUREAU of Internal Revenue and Bureau of Customs—the two-biggest revenue collecting agencies of the government—are the two most corrupt agencies of the government, according to the Social Weather Station's latest survey.

In a poll conducted from October last year to February this year, 68 percent of 500 respondents from the country's top 1,500 corporations believed the BIR was corrupt, while 66 percent felt the same way about the customs bureau.

Both scores were lower than the levels recorded over the last two years.

BIR and BOC officials said they considered the results of the survey as a challenge for them to pursue more reforms, particularly after two-thirds of the respondents blamed tax collectors for the prevailing corruption, while only 27 percent blamed taxpayers.

Varying estimates placed the cost of corruption at hundreds of billions of pesos yearly.

Corruption in the ranks has been blamed for the weak revenue collection of the BIR and BOC.

SWS president Mahar Mangahas said the business community is willing to contribute funds to fight the problem but believes dishonesty in business practices also have to be corrected.

BIR widens coverage of auditing system

By Michelle V. Ranso

MORE delinquent taxpayers are expected to be detected, as the Bureau of Internal Revenue widens the coverage of its new auditing system, which has generated billions of additional revenue since it became operational this year.

The BIR said its "Relief" auditing system would be rolled out in about 40 more district offices in Metro Manila, Pam-panga, San Pablo, Valenzuela and Cebu.

The system, which stands for "reconciliation of listings for enforcement," was piloted in selected district offices in Makati, Cebu and Valenzuela.

Relief can detect tax leaks through matching tax declarations of companies with third-party sources.

The BIR has collected some P5.14 billion in additional revenue as of March 24.

Philtranco to spend P4B to expand fleet

By Gil C. Cabacungan Jr.

PHILTRANCO Service, the country's oldest and largest bus company, is spending up to P4 billion in five years to buy new buses and ferry boats, and refurbish and expand its terminals.

In an interview yesterday, Philtranco chief executive Jose Antonio said the expansion program would allow Philtranco to take the lead role in the government's plan to build a seamless highway on the country's western seaboard that would take passengers and cargo through five major islands: Luzon, Mindoro, Panay, Negros and Mindanao.

Philtranco has been raising money since 1999 to buy 200 new buses from MAN of Germany and 12 ferry boats, build "super terminals," and boost its passenger and cargo services.

Philtranco has already acquired 100 buses since 1999, Antonio disclosed.

Antonio said Philtranco was responding to President Macapagal-Arroyo's push to modernize the land transportation business to give Filipino travelers a cheaper alternative to air transport.

He said the company would eventually offer trips to Boracay or Cebu for a third of the cost of an airline ticket.

The President recently inaugurated Philtranco's P20-million central station in Pasay City that Antonio described as "the most modern bus terminal in the country at par with other bus terminals worldwide."

The terminal offers large air-conditioned lounges, clean comfort and shower rooms, boarding and baggage handling systems similar to those found in airports.

Antonio said this year's expansion program would jack up Philtranco's passenger capacity to 3,000 a day from 1,000 and boost cargo volume to as much as 100 tons a day.

"We consider the cargo business a separate entity, with a vast potential for growth, and we are continuing to develop this sector," Antonio said.

Antonio and Philtranco chair Jose Ch. Alvarez took over majority control of Philtranco in 1999.

Alvarez is the owner of Tritan, a major Southern Tagalog bus operator, which has since been merged into Philtranco's network.

Philtranco has an existing fleet of 349—20 units for luxury services, 164 air-conditioned units and 165 ordinary units—serving 13 major terminals nationwide.

Bayan slams 'embedded' PPA charges, fees

A MILITANT group yesterday hit the Energy Regulatory Commission for allowing the Manila Electric Co. to hide purchased power adjustment charges, even as other groups insisted that they be given a part in the review of Meralco's contracts with independent power producers.

Bagong Alyansang Makabayan spokesperson Renato Reyes Jr. said in an interview that the ERC was misleading the public when it claimed that power rates would go down due to the unbundling of Meralco's rates.

Unbundling means the separation of power rates as they appear on customers' bills into components, such as generation, transmission, distribution and supply charges.

Last month, the ERC issued a 104-page decision allowing Meralco to raise its rates by 22 centavos per kilowatt-hour through the unbundling scheme.

"The ERC decision practically legitimized the collection of the PPA by 'embedding' this with the generation charge," Reyes said.

Reyes said small consumers would be worst hit by the unbundling of Meralco's rates, with those consuming up to 50 kwh a month paying P91 more.

"Based on our study of actual bills under the old billing system, marginalized consumers paid only P219.23 a month," he said. "With the unbundled and raised rates, they would pay about P320." Ronnal W. Domingo

Intimate configuration

PEOPLE who just moved into newly built townhouses know the situation all too well. A typical unit may look polished from the outside, but it's still a work in progress inside.

Nonexistent cabinets, rough, unpainted concrete floors and walls, and basic kitchen and toilet fixtures are more the norm than the exception.

Architect Dante Aguirre found himself in a similar fix when he first stepped into his three-story Northpoint townhouse in Pughad Lawn, Quezon City, two years ago.

"Each brand-new unit was made of sturdy reinforced concrete," he says, "but I still needed to put in a considerable amount of work and money to make the place livable and stylish."

Hiring a contractor was out of the question since it required Aguirre to cough up at least P500,000 for the job.

What's he in the industry for? Instead, he tapped the services of two teams composed of carpenters and electricians. His efforts paid off in the form of big savings—P150,000 to be exact.

Aguirre began the work by having several walls and a pair of sliding glass doors knocked down to make way for a pair of indoor rock gardens on the first and second floors. The walls got a fresh coat of white paint, while the rough concrete floor downstairs metamorphosed into white granite tiles.

He then had both bathrooms retiled soon after. The toilet fixtures upstairs had to go as well, in favor of sleek imported brands.

"I have my staff to thank for the cutouts," he says with a wink. "I have them change it at least every two weeks."

Permanent sheen

In his own home architect Dante Aguirre shows how to reconstitute a newly built townhouse even before it is constituted the entire area with a permanent sheen. If anything, the floor is a no-frills affair requiring no more than a damp cloth to maintain.

By having the railings removed, Aguirre was able to transform a structure as utilitarian as the stairs into a sculptural element. He further polished each step with black cement and lined it with black ceramic tiles.

"In less than a month, I was able to move in," he says with a chuckle. "I really had to do it quick because I wanted to be as close as possible to my elderly parents."

Aguirre used the savings to buy additional lighting fixtures from Italy and various accent pieces from all over Europe that now make up his new home, a cross between modernism and Zen.

"I'm lucky I came from a condominium," he adds. "I was able to fit in most of my old furniture pieces and art collection."

Aguirre credits his family for nurturing in him a passion for the arts. His father, Eric Aguirre, is also an architect. He also comes from a clan of artists such as National Artists Francisco "Botong" Francisco and Lucio San Pedro.

Aside from his own sculptural pieces, Aguirre's cache includes a pair of "Boomerang" chairs by Philippe Starck, a sculpture by National Artist Napoleon Abueva, several acrylic works by Jun Duarte, an installation art by Erwin Chiongson, and a prized acrylic painting by Lao Llanben titled "Light and Substance." He had the work, which now hangs prominently on ability of people to execute them, Aguirre admits that it was no joke to transform a bare townhouse into a chic abode.

It certainly helped that he knew the townhouse's configuration by heart. After all, as one of the architects of E.V. Aguirre & Partners, he himself designed the units that now make up the entire middle-class community, including its public areas such as a park, clubhouse and basketball court.

"I knew what walls to knock down and where to tap for new electrical connections," he says. "I certainly needed more outlets because of the additional lighting system I had to install."

Aguirre, for example, had the guestroom wall knocked down and moved several inches to provide him access to his meditation garden featuring bamboo poles and real plants he himself tends (the one in the living room was designed by Chiongson).

Since he plans to build another flight of stairs leading to the still-to-be-refurbished third-floor attic, he left the stainless steel railing on the second floor devoid of glass sheets.

"I don't want to spend on something that I'd have to knock down in the future," he says. "I plan to have a cathedral ceiling and metal stairs suspended on turn buckles and cables for the attic."

Second flight

Actually, a second flight of stairs wasn't in the original plan. Ideally, building a spiral staircase on the second-floor landing is the cheapest and easiest way to get to the attic. That was until Aguirre had his private bathroom adjacent to the landing extended to make room for a linen cabinet.

"The bathroom's wall had to be moved as well, leaving little room for a spiral staircase," Aguirre explains.

Aguirre's private sanctum echoes the minimalist flavor of his all-white living room. This time, however, he worked for a warmer feel by combining white with cobalt blue "satin" walls. The color scheme is repeated in the so-called tuxedo curtain by the window.

The man's fondness for anything modern extends to the streamlined wood-and-glass table in black and silver-gray automotive finish. Like a set of Lego blocks, the Italian-made

LIFESTYLE

Lifestyle is out, values are in

THE WAR is in our bedroom, and we're not about to press the remote control's off button. Unlike our parents who went to war, we were not destined to go to the war front—unless you consider picket lines war, which they're not. Instead, the war invaded our zen-candle-filled home.

LIFE-STYLED

Thelma Sioson
San Juan

At the end of the day you come home to old-fashioned security, anything to give you shelter from today's missiles and virus nation before Baghdad. From then on, war-news junkies became familiar with one obscure battle zone after another.

Time and Newsweek gave the stories, the philosophy, the protagonists, the terms behind the war. Bunker busters. MK 84s. Neo-conservatives. The top Iraqi spy who tipped off Pentagon on where Saddam was supposedly spending the night, thus the rush precision-bombing on the war's first night. The dictator's ex-mistress who confirmed to the military top brass that the man on the news video was indeed Saddam—by counting the moles on his face.

We'd been on war-story diet ever since and we're beginning to get used to the sense of (distant) danger, until SARS hit. Then the danger became much closer to home—only a sneeze and a cough away, to be precise.

Just the other day I overheard some moms complaining that the drugstore had run out of surgical masks. This was here, not in Hong Kong.

The masks could very well be the latest product of what "futurist" Faith Popcorn called the "paranoia industries." If the '80s had the decadent lifestyle, the '90s the "Decency Decade" (Popcorn's term), the lifestyle of the 21st century is obviously being determined by paranoia. This is not to say that the dangers aren't real. They are, but they magnify into insecurities bordering on paranoia.

Last Monday, at our Metro Weddings bridal show, the Hotel InterContinental poolside brimmed with guests, each one we presumed had SARS at the back of his mind but did not let fear take over, not enough to skip beso-beso.

When I reminded my hermit friend Auggie Cordero that he, with the other designers, had to face the crowd and take a bow at curtain call, he complained, "I'll have to hold my breath that long?" (I didn't want to know if he was serious or not.)

Paranoia wasn't born with SARS. It's been around like forever. But that and the frenetic lifestyle and the rat race gave rise to "cocooning" that started from the '90s to the present. Cocooning, Popcorn said, was when one had the "impulse to go inside when it just gets too tough and scary outside."

One seeks refuge in the home, which could be literal or figurative. It could be a state of mind.

With SARS, terrorism and all, today we have something like what Popcorn called "armored cocooning" where one tries to resort to every protection imaginable against impending danger.

All this brings me to my point: Like it or not, we're running back to good, old-fashioned values, like going home to Mama. The emphasis could shift from "lifestyle" to values.

The past two decades or even more, in fact, since I started covering a field we came to dub as "lifestyle," mostly everything was seen in terms of lifestyle—even politics and business. (I remember how in the Manila Chronicle, a news editor described my section as "peripheral" because it was "just lifestyle." He misread the times.) How we look, dress, dine, shop, keep fit, stay healthy, decorate our home, spend leisure, and so on.

Even Time, Newsweek, Fortune devoted covers to dieting, cosmetic surgery, health, the glamour business and the like. TV went into lifestyle magazine shows. There's the Lifestyle Network.

Nothing is spared so we can live it up, live chic—thanks to technology and software-to-go. Liposuction. Botox. All the fat-zappers. Anti-aging. You get the drift. We've been so in control. Then something like war and SARS hit and you realize you can't be in control all the time. Technology, glamour and all that self-indulgent lifestyle can give you only so much security. Even HK, the land of almighty deals, is quaking in its Louis Vuitton boots.

At the end of the day, you come home, even if only figuratively, and you find refuge and a sense of security in everything cozy and familiar.

Old-fashioned values, stashed away in the attic all this time, can give you solace. Family. LIFESTYLE/D4

Shangri-La Retail Arcade houses the German kitchen brands Bulthaup and Gaggenau and the Italian furniture brand Minotti, over which J.Lo gets wild

Kitchen class, living room charm

Text by Anne A. Jambora

TODAY'S homes are characterized by open spaces, by one fluid flow from the entertainment area to the kitchen. Unifying the living and the kitchen into one harmonious design, however, is a tricky business.

Those with impeccable taste and fat bank accounts may want to check the new high-end furniture showroom on the second level of Shangri-La Retail Arcade (Makati Shangri-La Hotel, Ayala Avenue, Makati City, tel. 812-8516 and 830-2230).

The showroom is the exclusive local distributor of the German brands Bulthaup and Gaggenau (kitchen) and the Italian brand Minotti (living room). These are brands that Hollywood stars go for. J.Lo recently bought a line of furniture for her villa with fiancé Ben Affleck. Sylvester Stallone has the kitchen, and so do celebrities George Clooney, Michael Jordan, Madonna and Julia Roberts.

Niche market

"Like paintings, you should know why it's expensive—the brushstroke, name of the artist, etc.," says the showroom's young owner and manager Perdi-nand Ong.

For starters, his kitchen pieces sell 30 percent above any known brand in the world.

Despite the turbulent times and plunging peso, Ong is optimistic about the future and his new business. "Things have no way to go but up," he says, "and we have prepared the infrastructure for these brands to work well when the economy picks up."

But why invest, say, P4 million, on a kitchen?

"The kitchen is not just for cooking; we sell a lifestyle with the kitchen," Ong says. "We can make it the centerpiece of your home, more comfortable for socializing and meeting people."

Eye for detail

Quality is assured with multifunctions for no-nonsense flexibility—mostly handmade. "We don't make anything ahead of time, and majority is handmade because we believe no machine can duplicate what a human hand can do."

That Bulthaup has a meticulous eye for detail is an understatement. Its bread container alone is made of terra cotta, which has the ability to retain and release moisture, keeping bread fresh longer.

A kitchen order of cherry wood panel, for instance—the same wood used for producing violins—will be made from one tree only. Sure, the method is environment-friendly, but to Bulthaup that means seamless grains, perfectly consistent from the top drawers to the bottom cabinets.

MOORE sofa, Klee and Diller armchairs, and Johns bookshelf

For future reference, leftover trees are kept in a temperature-controlled storage room in Aich, Germany. Customers are given a code, and should a door get damaged, a replacement will be made from exactly the same tree. Come mishaps, the Bulthaup kitchen will always look immaculate. "What's best, you can actually smell the tree when you walk into the kitchen," Ong says.

You can choose from Cherry, Maple, Beech, American Walnut, Bamboo, Apple and Oak. Lacquers are the same as those for grand pianos; door handles are made by aircraft manufacturers, and a shipbuilding technique is used to mesh things seamlessly.

Bulthaup is not lacking in technology either. Drawers without handles have touch latch-handle mechanism where a tap of the finger is all that's needed to open them, a childlock, a soft-glide mechanism that automatically closes drawers with just one gentle push, etc.

Timeless

Only two types of kitchen are available worldwide. System 20 and System 25. System 20 is the mobile kitchen—for those who are waiting for a permanent home to be finished but want the kitchen anyway, those who want to expand their imagination and often re-arrange their kitchens, or those who want to build slowly their dream kitchen.

Designs come with integrated kitchentops, cookware, chopping board, sinks, etc. Made mostly from high-grade stainless steel and aluminum, System 20 is the modern, industrial look.

System 25 veers toward the traditional, warm kitchen, ideal for those who want a permanent structure. Over 30 main colors in varying shades are offered and 25 different materials, from wood to steel to lacquer to laminate. Many clients, however, choose to mix-match both models to better suit their kitchen needs and preference.

"It's like the Barcelona chair," Ong says. "It's as timeless as it should be. We know our designs will fit a traditional house or an extremely modern house."

An option is to integrate Gaggenau kitchen appliances—"± 1" accuracy ovens and integrated cooktops of either electric or LPG gas. "The technology put into Gaggenau is three years in advance, that's why its design does not change in five years," Ong says. "In essence, we are the complete kitchen package."

Purity

For understated elegance, there's the Minotti living room showcase. Designs are a tad modern and chic, but are neither loud nor dry.

Everything in moderation, a careful balance of simple lines and subtle purity. Depending on aesthetic requirements, the Minotti lines offer 50 variations of sofas, armchairs, coffee tables, lamp, bookshelves, lounge chairs, dining sets, carpets and even beds.

The character pieces are handcrafted and made to order. Ong says Minotti sofa-makers undergo eight years of training. Feathers for the cushion, says Ong, are carefully inserted one by one for utmost comfort.

"It is, in fact, considered the most comfortable sofa in the world," Ong adds.

Minotti products are easy to maintain. Save for the frame, everything can be washed or dry-cleaned. There are over 100 colors to choose from, and fabrics range from leather, suede, pony hair, crocodile skin.

The showroom, although technically open from 10 a.m.-6 p.m., has flexible hours, depending on a client's availability. Appointments are necessary beyond regular store hours.

Out of Africa

KATHY Chua, who is in her early 20s, is back from a five-week solo trip to South Africa.

The country is not new to her. She was one of the Asian students sent by Cathay Pacific to Johannesburg in 1997 to visit the wilderness nearby as part of their prize in an essay contest.

Kathy returned from that first trip awed by what she saw, and learned about wildlife conservation. It even inspired her to organize My Zoo Volunteer Group Foundation, which, for the past three years, has been assisting Manila Zoo personnel as tour guides, among other functions.

Last September, when the World Summit on Sustainable Development was held in Johannesburg, Kathy went there even if she was not a participant. A camera bug (she has her own photo studio, Adphoto), she decided to use this skill along with her environmental interests to record the trip.

Her experience was doubly rewarding, for today, as she bubbles over with her stories, she has photos to illustrate them and ideas to share with environmentalists and anyone who cares to listen.

She could go on and on about her observations, but she's decided to concentrate instead on conservation efforts in the places she visited, which she hopes would be picked up by the Department of Environment and Natural Resources or other interested groups.

Backpacking

Incidentally, as a solo traveler, Kathy found it safer and more pleasurable to go with backpackers who were welcome wherever they went. It's also a great way to meet young people like herself.

Her trip took her from Joburg, site of Johannesburg Zoo, to Capetown, and even to Drakensburg, known as Tolkien country as it is the hometown of the famous "Lord of the Rings" author. In between were trips to several national parks where conservation was practically an art.

South Africans, Kathy says, know their animals. The more affluent kids go on safaris and bring their tents to learn about animals in their natural habitats.

The less affluent go to beautiful zoos, which sometimes offer lodgings and give them a good chance to observe the ways of the animals. Most zoos have breeding programs so visitors can see, first hand, how animals are cared for.

In her treks, Kathy saw animals she never even heard of before, like the blesbok, an antelope with horns.

Impala and wildebeest were all thriving, she reported, which was why some restaurants had their meats on their menus. This was permitted as long as the animal was not on the endangered list.

Some animals, however, were monitored

SEEING GREEN

Doris Gaskell Nuyda

closely to conserve them. It was illegal for individuals or pet stores to buy and sell them. One of these was the red-eared slider terrapin which, to Kathy, looked very much like a Ninja Turtle.

She is concerned about those in Manila Zoo, where about 120 of the species are cared for, most of them donated by people who originally saw them as cute little pets until they grew, unfortunately, into huge, unwieldy turtles.

In South Africa, Kathy saw, snakes, which are not cute at all, were not killed even during surprise encounters. South Africans know they have a role in the ecosystem.

One resident, Kathy recalls, found in her garden a poisonous species called the "boomslang" about a meter long. She caught it, kept it caged for some time, then decided to release it to seek its place in nature. After all, she reasoned, it's a tree-dwelling snake feeding on rats and other pests, and was not likely to harm people.

No transport problem

Tourists and backpackers had no problem with transportation, reported Kathy. They could always rely on the Buzbus to bring them to a hotel or lodging place, and then pick them up at a specified time and date. Somehow, this made Kathy feel safe and secure.

Ecotourism seemed like a way of life to South Africans, and making places attractive to visit was very much in their consciousness. The roads were wide and trees grew on both sides. It was common to see wild animals crossing the street, like the giraffe that Kathy photographed as it got between their motorcade.

Seeing ferocious animals at close range could be even more thrilling, Kathy learned, when she tried to "shoot" a lioness that caught a little fowl (Kathy couldn't identify it, not being a common species). But in the zoo, where dormitory space was available to backpackers like herself, lion cubs were just cute pets.

A visitor has several choices of eco-adventures in the South African wilderness. There are treetop canopy tours, where the adventurous can go swinging from tree to tree (à la Tarzan), 30 ft above the forest floor, aided by steel cables.

One can go black water tubing, paddling through jungle waters in tube tires; or kloofing, which is similar to bungee jumping—people jump into the water from cliffs—except that no ropes hold the jumper.

Tourists can also go biking or move around on a scooter through the forest. Kathy noted that not a single tree was cut, no animal or visitor injured, despite the varied activities.

Nature at its pristine best made ecotourism, not only enjoyable, but very profitable business as well.

Should he take up nursing or medicine?

DEAR Tita Dulce,

I'm now in my third year in psychology and still haven't decided which to take after this—nursing or medicine? My parents, who are both schoolteachers, said they will support me whichever I choose. I go to one of our top universities so, modesty aside, I have a good chance of finishing either.

I understand that there is good demand and very good pay for nurses abroad. That will enable me to achieve my dreams of helping finance my younger siblings' education and building a house for my parents.

On the other hand, why be a nurse when I can be a doctor? Also, the competition for nursing jobs abroad might be steeper now because even our doctors are taking up nursing and going abroad.

DENNIS

LIVE AND LET LIVE

By DENNIS

Tita Dulce

I would not worry about the competition. As I understand it, the high demand for nurses in the US and in several other countries is projected to last for the next several decades. There will still be lots of openings for you even if doctors-turned-nurses have joined the market.

In the long run, however, what you'd earn as a nurse would be much, much less than what you'd earn as a physician. As a physician, you can also still earn from private practice even when you're past 60 years old, whereas you would likely be retired (and unemployed) by then if you were a nurse.

However, it takes 13-14 years before one can become a full-fledged physician and start earning, while it takes only about half of that period in the case of a nurse. If you take up medicine, then, it is quite unlikely that you will be able to help pay for your sibling's education. (As a doctor, though, you can easily loan them funds later for the education of your nieces and nephews.)

You can build a house for your parents from your income as either a nurse working abroad or as a physician. They'd have that house earlier, though, if you were a nurse. If you were a physician, on the other hand, that house would have to wait several years later, although it will most likely be a bigger house and in a nicer neighborhood.

One "intervening" factor you might have missed to factor in is your marriage plans. Your ability to share your funds and time with your siblings and parents will be greatly reduced when you marry. I think the advantage would be greater if you were a physician: You could remain an attractive bachelor longer than if you were a nurse, and your income would still be bigger than a nurse's even after you've split it between your parents and your own family.

So, it seems it all boils down on how you want your profession to reward you. If you want the reward soon, take up nursing, but scale down the benefits. If you want bigger benefits, take up medicine, but increase your patience.

If you still haven't decided after you've finished your psychology course, then enroll in nursing. The fees are lower than in medical school. Should you change your mind later, you could shift to medicine, and your nursing subjects would still be credited.

Faith and spirituality. Honesty. Tight little relationships and cuddling. Popcorn now calls them Oprah-warmth (Why do you think she's this Age's icon?). The stuff that reminds you of the good memories of childhood.

In short, it's anything that gives you shelter from today's missiles and virus.

I think, in the days to come, people will connect not so much to lifestyle, as to values. Lifestyle, as we have come to define it, has become so ephemeral and vulnerable. What people need these days is chicken soup for the soul because life is a b--ch (and a cliché).

Gere on Ritts, Andre on Vreeland

Speaking of tight little relationships, I didn't know that reading Vogue could tap into your emotions (vanity is no emotion, it's Mastercard/Visa-stressed) until the March issue, where Richard Gere had a touching essay on a bosom friend, the famed photographer Herb Ritts (he discovered the star presence of Madonna before she became Madonna) who died late last year at 50.

Gere knew Ritts in the mid-'70s and both grew into icons in their respective fields. Gere's essay had touching anecdotes, with this most personal ending: "His ashes were laid in the Pacific surf, and he was gone. We threw gardenias in the water. I don't care about his photographs. I'll miss him terribly."

Vogue editor Andre Leon Talley excerpted from his forthcoming book "A.L.T." his recollections about two women who shaped his life—and taste: His grandmother Bennie Frances Davis and the fashion legend Diana Vreeland.

I cannot forget the sight of Talley, this famous byline in Vogue. It was at a Gucci launch in a museum in Milan. I was getting a few words from Tom Ford and he was beside Ford—this huge man in a loose jacket with huge prints, huge bag. More than that he was wearing the accessory of the moment: Attitude. He seemed like a good-natured man.

As it turned out, Andre was raised by his grandmother who "toiled as a maid" in North Carolina. He considered Vreeland his surrogate mom and was by the fashion diva's side even in her last few days.

He recalls: "After Mrs. Vreeland's sight became weak, she took to her bed. That dreary December evening was the first time I was received by Mrs. Vreeland in bed. Her explanation was simple, 'Andre, I've had such a wonderful life and now I've decided to take it easy.'"

Andre writes: "Fashion is no substitute for family, and I do not believe I could ever have learned to appreciate haute couture had I not learned to appreciate simpler things first. Faith, hope, charity, add luxury to the list, because it was that important, taken that seriously in our home. Not the luxury of surfeit and sumptuousness but the luxury of ordinary tasks done well and in a good frame of mind."

That's what I mean about good old-fashioned values reigning supreme these days.

Strong women

Last Monday, the Manila Polo Club saw the gathering of what must be the True Girl sector of the country—women supporting the presidential bid of Raul Roco. About 70 were expected but about 200 showed up, mobilized by Lorna Kapunan. To tick off the names of those present: Bea Zobel, Mercy Tuson, Nin Quezon Avanceña, Vicky Garchitorena, Tessie Luz, Lydia Castillo, Evelyn Sangson, Nini Licaros, Sabsy Palanca, among others.

They're calling themselves Women for Roco or W4R, which I reminded, Lydia read more like War. Easily they're among the most strong-willed women in the country, iron ladies who, it seems to me, can take on not only any Roco opponent, but even Saddam himself.

Of business travel wardrobe essentials and voluminous locks

"Is there anything as horrible as starting on a trip? Once you're off, that's all right, but the last moments are earthquake and convulsion, and the feeling that you are a snail being pulled off your rock."—Anne Morrow Lindbergh, Hour of Gold, Hour of Lead

THE COMPANY I am working for is sending me to New York for a series of meetings. I need a wardrobe that is professional, urbane and chic that will take me through five grueling days of negotiations. This is my first business trip, so I'm a bit nervous and harassed. Please give me tips on what and how to pack for this important sojourn.

APPLES' PICKINGS

Apples Aberin-Sadhwani

The first step in planning your business travel wardrobe is to get an overview of your trip. You already know the destination, duration and purpose, but you must also consider dress codes, not just of the firm you are representing, but of the company you will be dealing with.

Regional dress codes are important, too. It will serve you well to remember that New York is a fashion capital and most of its denizens are impeccably groomed and superbly dressed in basic colors like black, grey or chocolate brown.

You should also keep in mind the various activities you will be engaging in. For example, after all your meetings, will you also be attending cocktails, dinners or the like? Then, make it a point to check the weather so you can dress appropriately.

After taking all these into consideration, the goal is to put together a few pieces that can be worn in different ways and for various occasions. Since this is a business trip, the cornerstone of your wardrobe is a well-tailored suit in a neutral color. Choose one with fabric that has a bit of stretch and does not wrinkle easily.

Then, choose various tops, bags, shoes and accessories that can be mixed and matched with your suit. One day, you can wear your suit with a pastel-colored silk blouse and pearls. For another meeting, you can match it with a knit shell or a sweater set.

A black dress is another staple that can take you from the boardroom to dressy affairs. Wear it with a jacket and sensible pumps for your presentations. For an evening out, match it with stilettos and bold jewelry. You can maximize the use of a particular article of clothing by using accessories or color accents to transform its appearance. Bear in mind that people tend to recall what you wear on top more than the bottom.

In the process of packing your clothes, make sure that you have the right underwear for your outfits. And just in case you will be traveling during the winter, spring or fall, remember that it is better to dress in layers so you can adjust to climate changes or from moving indoors and out.

To make packing easier, you can also lay out all the clothes in your bed and create combinations. Make sure you try them on before packing and check for any stains, missing buttons, broken zippers and such.

Better yet, why not make a list of all the things that you need to bring? You might even want to go as far as creating a wardrobe schedule or rotation. This way, you can edit the articles of clothing you are bringing and yet make the most of each and every piece.

I've been reading a whole slew of fashion magazines and I've noticed that big, bouncy, sexy, J-Lo-like hair is so in. The problem is I have extremely limp and fine hair. I am so frustrated because it seems totally impossible for me to attain luscious locks. Any suggestions?

After several seasons of severely straight hairstyles that sent a majority of women to various salons for rebonding or hair straightening and relaxing sessions, refreshingly big, sometimes tousled, ultra-feminine 'dos are back in the forefront of fashion and beauty. Now is the perfect time to give your hair and damaging hair irons much-needed rest.

The good news is that there is a sure-fire way to achieve voluminous and healthy-looking hair so, don't despair. Kerastase, a leader in high-end haircare, has designed Volumactive, a new range in its strengthening line of haircare products that can help add volume and life to weak, fine and limp hair.

Breathe body and lift into your lifeless locks by following these simple steps:

Step 1: Cleanse
Use Kerastase Volumactive Bath, a bodyifying shampoo that not only cleans but also reinforces hair fiber and adds texture. Thanks to this revolutionary new product, hair becomes stronger, more resistant and gains more body.

CLEANSE, care and texturize your hair for that sexy J-Lo look.

Step 2: Care
Condition your tresses with Kerastase Volumactive Cream, a vitalizing conditioner that is ultra-light and gives strength and substance to damaged hair. It also detangles, gives body, shine and softness.

Step 3: Texturize
Use Kerastase Volumactive Mousse when styling your hair. This texturizing mousse literally thickens the diameter of hair thus, creating the appearance of more voluminous locks. In addition, it also provides a lasting but natural-looking hold.

To further repair your fine, limp and possibly weak hair, you may also use Kerastase Substance Constructive, a leave-on conditioner of sorts that helps your hair gain consistency and a light feeling. It rebuilds hair from the inside and restores its strength. And as an added bonus for those with colored hair, this product helps preserve color brightness.

The right tools like a good vent or roller brush, blower and Velcro rollers and the like are also essential in attaining the hairstyle you desire. For instance, after blow-drying your hair, using large Velcro rollers will help add much needed lift and body.

Although these and other styling tips and tricks can help you achieve voluminous hair, taking care of your hair and avoiding damage and dryness through the use of the right products and treatments are of utmost importance. Of course, a healthy lifestyle is still the number one beauty secret. If you are unsure about the kind of products your hair needs, simply ask your trusted hairdresser to draw up a personalized home care ritual to help you achieve optimum results.

PRETTY IN PINK. Ara Mina redeems herself in Marden Iglesias' strapless pale pink gown.

PUCKER PHASE. Not even the pretty Anne Curtis can get away with this unflattering iridescent taffeta gown.

TAKE THAT! Dina Bonnevie shows stars half her age how to look sexy and glamorous in Nono Palmos' 1950s-inspired black-and-white gown with fichu collar.

SCULPTURAL SLIP. Petite Chin-chin Gutierrez is weighed down by her Filipiniana-inspired piña lina gown's exaggerated details.

SEEING GREEN. Snooky Serna-Go is as chic as ever in an emerald chiffon column by Nono Palmos.

HAIR TODAY. Pops Fernandez sports curly top to complement the confusing details of her chiffon gown.

COLOR HER SUMMER. Lorna Tolentino looks yummy in Paul Cabral's high-waisted, strapless gown with a sash cut on the bias.

SHORT ORDER. Michelle Quizon goes for a wrap-around skirt fit for the rainy days.

All that trash!

SHE HAD IT COMING! Maricel Soriano only has herself to blame in this unflattering beaded dress as she does a Catherine Zeta-Jones.

What was supposed to be a celebration of the film industry's most outstanding feats (or more likely the lack of it) during the past year quickly degenerated to pure and simple farce the minute Maricel Soriano emerged onstage and began aping Catherine Zeta-Jones—with matching bob, dancing shoes and a bulging tummy—in her show-stopping "All That Jazz" number in the film version of "Chicago."

Please tell us our ears were playing tricks on us. Except for an anemic rendition of the Bob Fosse-inspired livewire choreography, everything about the entire production rang hollow, including Maricel's voice. Catherine should demand royalties!

Sure, everybody loves a recent Oscar winner, but why on earth would a people who style themselves as heirs to one of the oldest film industries in Asia showcase an excerpt from a production number as alien to Manila as the Windy City?

And that fully beaded number wreaked havoc on Maricel's, uh, healthy figure. If she continues to balloon any further, we won't be surprised if she returns onstage next year as the hefty Mama Morton.

Bejewelled Gretch

Perhaps, the whole world by now knows Gretchen Barretto has Bvlgari pieces supposedly by the box load (that can be gleaned from the way she has been seen all over town lately dripping with jewelry of all shapes, sizes and makes). But we don't see the point why she had to display several sets of sparklers and slip into two gowns by Inno Sotto in one night.

No, she didn't host the show, nor was she a recipient of a special prize, although she was indeed named "Face of the Night."

As if the shawl and drop earrings weren't enough, Gretchen was unable to resist the urge to display her chunky bracelets, brooches, glittery hair accents and, at one point, an eye-popping necklace made of what

DIAMONDS ARE FOREVER. Gretchen Barretto goes for drop-dead glamour in Inno Sotto's black-and-white column.

COSTUME CHANGE. Not content with all that jewelry, the diva takes a dive in a gown with a busy skirt and too-tight bodice.

looked like diamonds and emeralds

One more quibble: What was with Gretchen's pair of "Incredible Hulk" eyebrows? We don't want to be mean, but they looked like black patches only the late Jim Henson's muppets would be caught dead with.

Wrong hairstyle

Pops Fernandez's wrong hairstyle further weighed down Randy Ortiz's chignon halter with a series of small bobs. It wasn't exactly one of the designer's best efforts, and Pops didn't help improve it by wearing long, curly locks. Aside from making the gown look less busy, a soft, clean chignon would have been more apt for her age.

Dina Bonnevie also looked smashing in Palmos' black-and-white gown with a fichu collar that harked back to the 1950s.

Lovely

The ever-lovely Dina is no longer as slim as she used to be, and she knows it. Palmas' move to draw attention away from her waist and instead focus on her chest worked wonderfully. Eat (bulaga) your heart out, Vic Sotto!

Lorna Tolentino is another woman whose taste and looks get better as she ages. Paul Cabral put a number of twists to the strapless, empire-cut gown Lorna wore. For one, the unusual combination of hot pink, orange and canary yellow was quite tricky. It celebrated the colors of summer, all right, but such a combination was quite difficult to pull off at an evening affair, especially in the Philippines where formal wear is often limited to black.

And the canary yellow sash Cabral draped on Lorna's lower bodice down to the hem of her orange skirt was cut on the bias for a streamlined look. The accent might seem like an ordinary sash tied around the bodice, but Cabral swore that it was stitched to make it look more seamless.

Thank goodness not all is lost in the dimming world of local show biz. A slimmer Sharon Cuneta, who wore a black off-the-shoulders column also by Cabral, pulled off the evening's biggest surprise.

Made of a special jersey, the gown had fitted sleeves and bodice that surprisingly hid the Megastar's bumps and bulges. Swarovski beads, mini-butterfly brooches and a pair of bright-colored sashes, again stitched and cut on the bias, adorn an otherwise simple outfit. If anything, the detail made Sharon slimmer and taller.

And unlike Maricel, Sharon sang old as-in-Viva-vintage-but-original Filipino music, which she dedicated to Lifetime Achievement Awardee Susan Roces. After all that earlier trash, er, jazz, there's a glimmer of hope yet for the ailing movie industry.

Rustan's summer lines take their inspiration from the French summer hideaway

By Jasmine W. Payo

AS the weather heats up, it's time to bring out once again your summer wardrobe of board shorts, sarongs and bikinis.

For designers, summer is an important event in the fashion calendar. It's the season to introduce a new list of must-haves, from the hottest day-to-night look to travel wear and sexy beach apparels.

Recently unveiling its summer collection, Rustan's shows us how to look fresh during these hot days.

According to Rustan's team of designers, this year's collection takes inspiration from summer destination Saint-Tropez, France. And true enough, these trend watchers have taken the cue from the pastel-colored buildings of the chic vacation spot, as the dominant colors of their summer wear include various shades of blue, pink, tomato red and citrus orange.

Florals and paisleys

The summer look won't be complete though without the bright flowers and cute paisley prints. Whites and denims have also become staples, providing a cool and breezy look.

Aside from the bright look, this season also assures comfort, with plenty of light and cool fabrics such as cotton, voile and linen.

Like most summer collections, Rustan's focuses on resortwear and swimwear, with Benetton and Little Kiss featuring bikinis in bold colors and flirty cuts.

Just as fun and sexy are the tops and summer dresses with pleats and ruffles from Jill and BCBG, and the interesting embroidery details of Oleg Cassini's line.

Day-to-night casuals, whether for travel or a beach night-out, are provided by Sinequanone, To the Max and Criselda Lontok.

For a more easy-going style for men, Salt features tops with embroidery details. MR also offers casuals and swimwear, while U shirts go sporty with numbered shirts inspired by basketball and soccer jerseys.

Children's wear from Jam are also highlighted with dainty dresses that come in printed and embroidered floral designs, and Hawaiian-inspired shirts and shorts.

Rustan's, of course, is not leaving out other fashion must-haves. Matching the trendy summer clothes are the sandals and flip flops, beach bags, and accessories such as trendy belts, bangles and necklaces.

So, are you ready to sizzle this summer?

Menswear: Relaxed chic for the outdoors

LOUIS Vuitton takes relaxed chic outdoors with its 2003 Spring/Summer Menswear collection. The Vuitton man, in the style of an elegant adventurer straight from the pages of National Geographic, relaxes in designs influenced by trekking wear. Ultimate comfort is procured from the luxury of natural, lightweight and cool materials such as jersey, cotton canvas, silk, etc., or protective fabrics like buffalo hide.

The collection, a blend of mineral shades that oscillate between glacier blue and slate gray interspersed with splashes of amethyst, orange and ochre, is structured around five themes.

Multicolored patchwork designs feature a mixture of bold colors such as mauve, blue and orange, and mineral hues such as sky blue and stone gray.

The key designs of the collection include a knitted sweater sporting wide stripes in a multicolored mélange of the latest shades and a pair of jeans.

This season sees a comeback of the cotton jersey sleeveless top, which punctuates the collection with a real outdoor feel. Cotton boxer shorts and trousers fitted at the ankle with rib trim are accessorized with pressed studs.

For protection against the weather, wide trousers, soft-hooded sweatshirts or jackets in buffalo hide provide another high point of the collection. Teamed up with softer articles, in matching tones of mauve, the look immediately takes on a lighter tread.

This season's selection of sporty jackets includes cotton canvas parkas for a more easy-going style and features a host of practical details such as removable collars, hoods, waistbands with drawstrings or more decorative designs and special effects using zippers and press studs.

Airy sweaters in white or gray cotton are adorned with set-in detail on the shoulders and flat pockets plastered across the tummy. Flyaway silk windcheaters as well as jackets and bomber jackets styled in technical cottons add a complementary summer touch to the collection.

Cool colors such as white, perma and light gray offer breezy refreshment to these designs.

In the urban department, we find a multitude of denims in various shades of indigo with jackets featuring flat, press-stud pockets, trousers with rib trim, leather belts with geometric motifs in embroidered or woven cotton.

This idea of relaxed chic is reiterated in a selection of comfortable sweaters and zip-up cardigans in monied, pastel cashmere or pixel-effect blue-gray.

Wool trousers and jackets featuring fine tennis stripes in different tones of gray are teamed up as separates. With just one button, the jackets are either single- or double-breasted and worn over straight-cut, tapered trousers. These suits, worn with two-tone glacier and orange goose down jackets or with a windcheater tied at the waist, radiate decidedly informal and relaxed allure.

Finally, the 1D tags, which were featured heavily in the Winter 2002 collection, have been replaced by new pyrite cube pendants engraved with the LV initials, and the reporter's bags have made way for new-look Monogram sleeping bag, worn over the shoulder.

The hands-free culture is widely explored this season with details like lace-work pockets and pendant holders, among other features. Details that are carried through right down to the flexible trekking shoes styled in calf skin suede and two-tone cotton canvas.

Louis Vuitton is located on the G/F 6750 Ayala Avenue, Makati City.

It's open season for fashion

ALL the fashion capitals in the world—from Milan, Paris, New York and London to Hong Kong—devote an entire week to their fashion forecasts for spring/summer and fall/winter as interpreted by the biggest and best names in fashion design.

In Manila, the Fashion Week has been a much-awaited event every year since its debut in 1997. Produced by Runway Productions and CalCarré International Models Philippines, under the overall concept, supervision, management and direction of Joey Espino and Audie Espino, the objective of Fashion Week is to educate Filipinos about the latest style trends being adopted by the global industry.

Fashion Week 2003 brings together for the first time the country's well-respected fashion designers led by Ben Farrares, dean of Philippine fashion. The other participating designers are members of the Filipino Designers Group (FDG), Fashion Design Council of the Philippines (FDCP), Fashion Designers Association of the Philippines (FDAP), the Cebu and Davao designers, plus other equally talented fashion designers who won in international competitions and designers who have gained popularity and success in their own right all these years.

Now imagine 70 fashion designers pooling together their creative energy and ingenuity in interpreting what will be the best for the summer season. Here is the schedule of shows:

AGE, truly, is just a state of mind. And there's no better proof than Penshoppe, still as youthful and hip as when it first came out 17 years ago. If anything, the brand is getting even hipper and cooler year after year.

Penshoppe is synonymous with casual street clothing—very classic but never without a twist. The styles are straightforward and down-to-earth, but always with an edge. The Spring-Summer 2003 collection, previewed in this page, evidently does not veer away from that image.

Young babes get to be Mandy Moore—or at least dress like her—in smocked or button-down tops, collared or cotton tees, and summery tanks that they can pair with denim skirts, capris, plain khaki or floral print shorts.

Of course, there's an endless choice of denim jeans—pintucked, laced-up, boot-cut, flared—because who doesn't love denims?

Dudes can be as hot as Brad Turvey in tees, tees and more tees—striped, printed, appliqued. Youthful roomy shirts come in graduated colors, checks or embroidered with summery palm patterns. There are denim jeans in various finishes and washes, casual and board shorts and the oh-so-utopian cargo pants.

Penshoppe covers a full circle with its accessories collection. It has a selection of the coolest eyewear with multicolored lenses to counter the summer glare. There are messenger bags and caps for the guys, and functional canvas totes for the gals.

This is the time of year when its cool and unarguably sensible to lose the stuffy shoes and walk the walk with comfy flipflops. Penshoppe's versions come in solid colors or with funky prints and patterns.

Like Penshoppe, stay hip and young—or at least dress like you are.

Penshoppe has 82 free-standing boutiques, and also has outlets in the department stores of major malls nationwide. Some of the items in this page are now available; the rest will come out in April and May.

Penshoppe's new collection remains true to its tradition of straightforward and down-to-earth styles, but always with an edge

Shiseido Celebrates Summer with the SunCare Line at El Nido Resorts

Shiseido Press Trip to El Nido Resorts

To celebrate summer with its SunCare line, Shiseido recently brought selected journalists to El Nido Resorts in Palawan. The sun-filled three-day trip was spent exploring the wonders of nature at El Nido. The group stayed at rustic Miniloc Island Resort on the first night, and moved to the elegant Lagen Island Resort on the second night.

This summer, Shiseido has an exclusive tie-up with El Nido Resorts. Every P500 purchase from the SunCare line entitles the customer to one (1) raffle ticket for a trip for two to El Nido. Two raffle prizes will be given away. The first draw will be on May 2, 2003 (Lagen Island) and the second draw will be on June 2, 2003 (Miniloc Island). Promo period is from April 1 to May 31, 2003.

100 MODELS WILL GO BOLD

THE RUNWAY reports from Paris, New York and Milan are signaling two major trends for summer. One shows bared shoulders, pretty prints, demure, well-put-together 50s and '60s looks and lots of very feminine, naked shoes with straps hither and thither. Think Julianne Moore as the elegantly turned out suburban housewife in "Far From Heaven." The other offers a workman-like casualness with cargo pants and jumpsuits paired with comfy old-style sneakers, moccasins, loafers and slippers.

Cole Haan's Spring Summer 2003 collection is right in step with the trends with a range of styles, from slum, sexy, dainty shoes to casual flats and mocs for the new utilitarian look. Its old-style artisan aesthetic (each shoe is handcrafted by skilled craftsmen using only the highest quality leather and materials) and casual luxury perfectly fit the new fashion mood.

Old-style elegance underpins Tina (from the City collection), a pointy stacked-heel calfskin mule with crisscrossed strap details on the upper. Show off shapely ankles and calves and well-pedicured toes with Pamela (also from the City collection), a delicate knotted sandal in fine calfskin, with polished leather sole and combination leather stacked heel.

Casually luxurious, to go with combat pants with multiple pockets or zippered jumpsuits, are styles from Cole Haan's smartly-designed Nike Air collection, which combines Nike's patented Air Technology and precision cushioning with vaunted Cole Haan handcraftsmanship. Air Windjammer is a winsome boat shoe in water-resistant nubuck, with Lycra collar for comfort and fit and lightweight siped rubber sole. Air Clipper is an equally nifty boat mule in water-resistant nubuck that comes in sat and orange and bright green and white.

Men's footwear is also plump with retro influences (for style guide, check out Leonardo di Caprio in "Catch Me If You Can") and urban moxie. Cole Haan's Spring Summer 2003 menswear collection fits the bill, with styles like Wilshire, a classic oxford in handcrafted calfskin with flexible stitched construction and leather sole and heel; and Air Zephyr, handcrafted monkstrap shoe in fine calfskin, with Nike Air Technology and dual-density, non-slip sole.

Cole Haan shoes are handmade using only the finest materials. Each pair is handcrafted by a single skilled craftsman, making Cole Haan's shoes unique pieces of modern artisanship.

Cole Haan's Spring-Summer Collections for men and women are available at The Powerplant Mall in Rockwell, Makati, and at Cole Haan boutiques located at Rustan's in Makati, Rustan's Tower (Shaw Blvd.), Rustan's Harrison Plaza and Rustan's Aabang Town Center.

St. Paul College Quezon City now DIN EN ISO 9001:2000 Certified

ST. PAUL College Quezon City had recently been awarded the DIN EN ISO 9001:2000 certification. It was held at the Pather James B. Reuter, SJ, Theater last March 9, 2003. The certification to DIN EN ISO 9001:2000 covers Delivery of Academic Services and Curriculum Design and Development through Integrative Modular Curriculum Delivery System (IMCDS).

The Certification Audit for ISO 9001:2000 for St. Paul College Quezon City was held last January 29-31, 2003. After the three-day evaluation of the academic services of the school particularly the Integrative Modular Curriculum Delivery System, the institution was hereby recommended for the ISO 9001:2000 Certification. This is in line with the reformulated vision and mission of SPCQ which stresses the development of quality instruction and design comparable with international standards, quality research, and community extension services; quality management systems, and; ongoing development of intellectual capital in an environment permeated with gospel values.

Being an ISO 9001:2000 Certified gives the institution the greatest advantage over its competitors. As the changing market and technology demands quality products and services, the ISO 9001:2000 puts an institution in the lead. As a consequence, production and supply of second-rate, poor quality products and services were eliminated. Institutions throughout the world are left with just one option to stay competitive and remain alive in the market and thus give focus on their customers.

The creation of the ISO 9001:2000, the latest version of the ISO 9000 series of Quality Management Systems, plays an integral part in ensuring that companies, whether dedicated to production and selling goods or services to customers, devote their business to quality and production with customers needs and requirements as first priority. It is an effective management tool which enables the institution to create an image to lead in the market.

St. Paul College Quezon City recognizes its responsibility as a provider of quality services within the framework of complete satisfaction of its customers. The institution exercise this responsibility through adequate training of its employees adherence to proven procedures, and total commitment to meeting and exceeding customer requirements, and maintaining an organizational culture that fosters continual improvement. Hence, the Quality Policy States:

SPCQ commits to provide Quality Paulinian Education that exceeds customer expectations through the delivery of excellent integral teaching and timely, reliable service in a familial environment highly conducive to continuous learning.

The process Model of the ISO 9001:2000 stresses the importance of customer needs, but it also suggests that to achieve total customer satisfaction, top management, together with all the people involved in every aspect of an institution's operations must get involved and participate in the continual improvement of the Quality Management System. This is based on the Deming Cycle of Plan, Do, Check, and Act (PDCA).

St. Paul College Quezon City is also currently PAASCU Accredited and further granted Autonomy and Deregulated Status by the Commission on Higher Education (CHED) for its enormous contribution to the growth and prominence of tertiary education in the country and Asia Pacific with its consistent committed service in providing quality education, research and community extension work.

ISO International Organization for Standardization - a worldwide federation of national standard bodies.

Certification to DIN EN ISO 9001:2000 covers the scope: Delivery of Academic Services and Curriculum Design and Development through the Integrative Modular Curriculum Delivery System (IMCDS).

ISO 9001:2000 Standard is the core of SPCQ Quality Management System (QMS) which includes the Quality Management Principles.

1. Customer focus
2. Leadership
3. Involvement of people
4. Process approach
5. Systems approach to management
6. Continual improvement
7. Factual approach to Decision Making
8. Mutually beneficial Supplier Relationship

Quality in SPCQ is -providing services to the customers with utmost regard to their needs and requirements.

- Involving people in every aspect of the institution's operations to participate in the continual improvement of the Quality Management System.

SPCQ Policy
SPCQ commits to provide Quality Paulinian Education that exceeds customers expectation through the delivery of excellent integral teaching and timely, reliable service in a familial environment highly conducive to continuous learning.

- QMS Benefits
- Promotes customer confidence
 - Initiates a world-class management culture
 - Attracts investments
 - Establishes quality-related policies
 - Produces consistency of output driven by properly documented processes
 - Reduces failure costs
 - Increases customer loyalty
 - Increases effectiveness and competency of personnel development

SPCQ DELIVERS INTEGRATIVE MODULAR CURRICULUM DELIVERY SYSTEM (IMCDS)

St. Paul College Quezon City starts offering selected on-line starting June, 2003. Interactive multimedia learning modules in selected subjects shall be issued to students who opted for supplemented on-line delivery beginning First Semester, SY 2003-2004.

The supplemented on-line lesson delivery consists of autonomous interactive modules (ILMS) in CD-ROM issued to students upon enrollment. Students consult their teachers in person on half of the scheduled classroom contact time and on line on the remaining half. The on-line contact time is expanded beyond the hours that the teachers is physically attending to her/his class through a 24-hour messaging facility that accepts and forwards messages and e-mail to teachers.

Initially, this will reduce travel and street exposure time for students enrolled in the on-line mode by half. Later improvements in delivery will enable students from anywhere in the world to enroll at SPCQ. The St. Paul System is present in 22 countries. Each St. Paul school shall serve as a proctoring center to enable administration of graded examinations to on-line students in person.

As the systems develops and student acceptance makes the program viable, completely on-line subjects shall be launched. Foreign students may be able to finish degrees offered by SPCQ with only half (or even less) physical residence time required in the Philippines.

Starting June 2003, freshmen lessons in undergraduate course at SPCQ shall be available in autonomous learning module by module enhanced with 24-hour collaborations site over HTTP://WWW.SPCQ-Online.org

Freshmen will report half of the contact time on campus and the other half online from their home. This reduces travel time and daily expenses to half or less. Enrollees from remote areas who cannot attend on campus sessions personally can take their lessons through synchronous real time scheduled online meetings from their residence or places of work. Validation and summative examinations shall be proctored in the nearest St. Paul school or accredited proctoring center.

For more information please log on to HTTP://WWW.SPCQ-Online.org
The online system is coeducational. Resident students remain exclusively for girls.

St. Paul College Quezon City

We follow the life of St. Paul. His was a life of blood, sweat and tears. Like St. Paul, our students sweat it out in class. This is not because we have poor ventilation, mind you, but because we squeeze out the best from them.

Now, no one can tell you what to do. You will not learn if you don't want to. So ask yourself this, do you want to? If the answer is yes, then our doors are open. The charity of Christ urges us to give you the best possible education. The charity of Christ will urge you to be the best that you can be.

By the way, in case you're wondering, this picture was not taken from a RE. class but from MassComm's Production 101.

Where do you want to go?
Who do you want to know?
Why do you want to achieve?
Do you want to?
